

Free Entertainment Array Is Sensational

The Fall Festival means it's "show time" again in Plymouth, and once again a sensational array of free entertainment will be offered afternoons and evenings at the Kellogg Park band shell.

Those long-time favorites, the Gaslighters, from Bimbo's in Ann Arbor, will divide stage time with such groups as the Interludes and the Banjo Pals to get things rolling Thursday, and for four days there will be a variety of attractions that will satisfy all tastes.

Seating will be available for hundreds of persons in front of the bandstand and there will be no charge for any of the performances. The full entertainment schedule appears elsewhere in this section.

Mrs. Daisy Proctor has had charge of booking the acts for the first three days of the festival, with Sunday's program in the hands of Harry Draper of the Rotary Club.

A highlight that afternoon will be the appearance of the Plymouth High School band under the baton of James Griffith. Not only has this organization won national acclaim for its musicianship, but this year has been provided an extra incentive through an invitation to participate in the famed Tournament of Roses parade New Year's Day at Pasadena.

The same bandshell area also will be the scene of two of the festival's most popular and traditional festivities, although they aren't defined specifically as entertainment.

One of these will be the pet show Saturday morning, sponsored annually by the Optimist Club, and once again it is guaranteed to attract just about all of the kids in Plymouth.

Then Sunday, in between the musical fare of bands and vocalists, will come the costume judging contest followed by a novel "Turn of the Century Costume Parade and Fashion Show."

Young and old alike are urged to join in the fun of that event. Those participating are asked to be at the bandstand at 3 p.m. The fashion parade will be at 4:45.

Authentic "turn of the century" attire is required and prize money and ribbons will be awarded in four categories. This and the window display contest are sponsored by the Plymouth branch of the American Association of University Women.

Thunderbird Hilton Inn salutes The Plymouth Fall Festival

As you commemorate the gentler days of yesterday -- look forward to the excitement of tomorrow!

Stop in at the Thunderbird Hilton for cocktail or lunch and watch the progress being made on Plymouth's newest hotel.

OPENING OCTOBER, 1972

The Grand Ballroom will be completed in time for your Fall weddings and banquets. The elegant facilities will accommodate an intimate group of 10 or an immense group of 1,000 in the fine Hilton tradition.
