Buying a new home is one of the most important steps you will ever undertake. Your decision will be more sound, both financially and emotionally, if you take time to investigate all aspects of the matter thoroughly and refuse to be rushed. Determine what you can afford and will be willing to pay, learn what the alternatives are, both in terms of housing and in terms of financing, and carefully examine your life style in terms of what you want. It is very true that we shape our dwellings and thereafter they shape us.
