Observing SPORTS WITH TOM DONOGHUE

The game of golf is an intriguing adventure into the jungles of sportsmanship and personalities.

Tournament action is one event that usually brings out both sides of the fence and the Observent and golf tournament at Whispering Willows was no exception.

"Answer and "Arren" of the two-day are the part's one land golf tournament at Whispering Willows was no exception.

I had the opportunity to take part in the two-day tourney run by Whispering Willows Pro Gary Whitener, watched a lot of area golfers, hit a few off the tees, drove all sorts of shots into the woods - water and putted my way over and around the greens.

There were 99 entries in the four flight men's competition but my, how some men turn to boys when they are obsessed with scoring better than their opponents.

There were countless arguments with Whitener Standing by his book of rules. Gary would have done better sitting behind a bench with gavel in hand.

How many strokes that were taken and not recorded will never be known as well as the number of balls that were tossed out of the woods or dug out of the eight inch rough.

Acquisitions were aplently around the club house.

A 12-YEAR BOY, Doug Mueller, made the error of not checking his card before signing, and it was submitted with an error in the addition. The error would not have made any difference in his standing. He still would have finished second in third high gross with a trophy for his showing:

A few bystanders said that he should be disqualified because of the error which is the rule.

But the edging of the majority of golfers around the club house, Whitener showed that of golfers do have hearts and Mueller received his award after being in complete tears because of the error.

Hats off to Whispering Willows greenskeeper Jim send for the word of a golf in preparing the course. The greens were like a carpet, the fairway, list was tougher than Oakland Hills' roughs for the PGA but don't worry, the grass is being shortened now.

Assistant Pro Tom Sheldon deserves a lot of the carrier in the content of a content of the surface of the greens and those roughs, well ... eight inches high in most spots and right off the fairway.

of the eight inch rough. Acquisitions were aplenty around the club house with disqualifications being kept to a minimum with Harriers fear of the tourney getting a little shackled. It was sort of amusing to watch grown men accusing each other of moving their ball and not playing it where it landed. One incident did bring heart warming tone to the At Bentley

By GORDONTUCKER

Several key fumbles and interceptions signaled defeat for Clarenceville as it was overpowered by Oak Park, 22-18.

"Turnovers were the big item in the game," explained your offensive line couldn't do it's objoon the running plays, but they did hold them pretty good in the second half."
