DR. EDWARD GREEN, Farmington, director of cardiology at Children's Hospital in Detroit, receives a Michigan Heart Assn. award from one of his patients, Sharon Vaughn, 6, of Orchard Lake. The award was for "dedicated service" to the association during Dr. Green's term as president.

NMU 'Kidnapping' Takes Girl To UP

FARMINGTON On CMU's campus had been told of their kidnapping, Nancy said they called their coach as they were departing. "I don't know if our message registered, though," she said. "He sounded awfully sleepy."

The girls got the final revenge, however. Prior to Saturday's game, the Northern band marched them back to the CMU student body section where they watched their team defeat their captors, 25-9.

Writing Guide Is Popular

YPSILANTI A useful tool for academic writers seeking publication of their articles on business is becoming something of a "mini-bestseller."

"An Academic Writer's Guide to Publishing in Business and Economic Journals" has sold some 400 copies across the country since it was published earlier this year. The 22-page book was compiled by David L. Kurtz and A. Edward Spitz, associate professors in the college of business, Eastern Michigan University.

The girls were put to work after Friday dinner. They were taken to the football stadium and ordered to aid in shining the team's shoes and to assist the band in its final preparations for Saturday's halftime show.

They met NMU President Dr. John X. Jamrich and head football coach Rae Drake and took part in the pre-game festivities.
