

Spanish Dancers Perform Feb. 1

Following enthusiastic receptions in such cities as New York, Dallas, Atlanta and Boston, Jose Molina's handsome young company of Spanish dancers, singers and instrumentalists will be on stage at Plymouth - Salem High School for one performance Thursday, Feb. 1. The program is jointly sponsored by the Schoolcraft College Cultural and Public Affairs Committee and the Plymouth Community Arts Council.

General admission at the door is $2. Curtain time is 8 p.m.

BILLED AS "Bailes Espanoles," the troupe has danced from the far west since its American debut two years ago. The performance features two hours of entertainment by America's amusements

number one Spanish song and dance company.

There are even some works dances from all of the Spanish provinces, from the court of Charles III, from the great Spanish operas and ballets measure.

Costumes for the production were designed in Madrid by Spain's foremost designers and are appraised at $80,000.

THE TROUPE is led by Jose Molina, a native of Madrid, who started dancing lessons when he was three. He studied Flamenco and Clasic Espanole dancing simultaneously.

By the age of 17, Molina was renowned in Spain and had toured the major cities of Europe. He came to the U.S. - following an appearance on the Steve Allen Show, was invited to join the Jose Greco company. He remained as first dancer with Greco for five years.

The next logical step in his career, and the fulfillment of the dream of every Flamenco dancer, was the formation of his own company.
