It's a

She's many things, the suburban woman.

You see her buying soap and cat food at your nearest supermarket; she's also in the classroom teaching your kids the secrets of science and the magic of poetry.

She may be a wife, a mother, a student, a job holder, a homemaker or an artist. Most likely she's a combination of several of these things.

For it's clear that she wears many hats.

The population explosion is over, replaced, it would seem, by a new feminine "identity explosion." The world is changing, and today's woman has opened up the avenues of her life to explore a whole new set of experiences for herself and the people she loves.

What does the Observerland woman think of women's lib, working mothers, the role of women in such diverse fields as medicine and banking-plus the age old challenges of running a home?

Come along with Focus and meet some of the typical -- and not so typical -- women in the Observer area.

Discover for yourself the kaleidoscope of activity that makes up today's woman's world.
