"Collecting State Taxes"

(Bay City Tribuue) The Grand Rapids Herald has bitterly attacked the method of collecting state taxes in Michigan, and it appears to have struck a chord of public sentiment in western Michigan. A taxpaver, for instance, pats the Herald on the back and lauds its purposes. He wants to know if this is the age of home rule, what business a state tax board has to go into a locality and raisc assessments after the local assessing board has satisfactorily fix its own tax assessments. He wants to know, further, what business the state equalizers have to guess how much the local taxes should be in creased or diminished. And thus he comments:

"It's all rot pensive rot. And it's all occasionsioned by the fact that we levy a state tax by counties when such a tax isn,t necessary. Just for the sentimental sake of maintaining a 'primary school fund,' we continue to let the state send its own funds (raised by specific taxation) to the counties for school purposes and then we make the counties raise a state tax (instead of an equivalen school tax) and send it to the state to pay state bills. If the county kept its own tax money and paid its school bills, and the state kept its own money and paid the state bills, we would save time and worry and expense and annoyance and we would do away with all necessity for this state machinery which seeks to "equalize" assess-ments between counties. Then it wouldn't be any county's business how some other county made its own assessments. This present system is just about as sensible and economical as it would be for a man who is in a hurry and shor of funds to go from Grand Rapids by way of Seattle. You can't make me think that it isn't possible to guarantee the schools of the state enough money to run with, with-out keeping this 'primary school fund' going, year after year at the expense of everybody in Michi-

The criticism of the Herald on the manner of collecting our state taxes certainly is causing many taxes certainly is causing many S. D., and Major seerey of Springpeople to sit up and take notice field, Illinois, who have been visand out of it is likely to result an iting their brother, Will Seeley and

The Herald is receiving lots of ordial support in its crusade.

Highly Entertained

The entertainment The entertainment given by Mrs. A. J. Doyle of Chicago at the Town Hall last Saturday night under the auspices of the Ladies Union, drew a large and appreciative audience

The subject of her reading was the story of Herod, by Stephen Phillip, and her audience was highly entertained by her rendition thereof. Mrs. Doyle also favored her hearers with several humorou selections, which were also greatly enjoyed.

The vocal solo by Dr. Willis A. Moore of Detroit contributed much to the enjoyment of the evening, as did a piano duet by Misses Ernestine Pierce and Helen Warner.

Mrs. Doyle formerly resided here, and many of her old friends availed themselves of the opportunity to hear her.
