

These women form the congressional committee, with headquarters in Washington. They work week in and week out for suffrage, and so well have they directed their efforts that the senate last year voted 35 to 34 for the Bristow-Mondell amendment. This amendment is now up for discussion in the house. Suffragists believe that within a few years a constitutional amendment providing for equal suffrage will be able to get through both houses with the necessary two-thirds majority.
