AIM FROM CAPTIVE BALOONS

Shricking of Shells Heard for 20 Seconds After Discharge of Enormous Mortars.

A correspondent of the Muenhener Neueste Nachrichten gives some interesting details about the famous German 16-inch siege guns that battered Antwerp into surrender and which have destroyed every fort a jainst which they have been directed. He deserted the successful bombardment the German began their advance against the German began their advance against the German began their advance against the fort of Manonviller, two of these huge mortars were firmly mounted at a distance of some six pulses from the forta. It was imporsible for those who served the suns to see the objects at which, they simed, since a number of hills intervened. But what the German seamed the control of their control of their firms and the control of their firms and the seamed with these guns to act the fortifications maps were not the and the direction of their firm.
