At the Garrick
Robert B. Mantell, the only actor now on the American stage considered worthy of regard to rank as the successor of a long line of tragedians which includes Forrest, McCullough and the Booths, and the only one now attempting the greatest heavy roles of Shakespeare and the classic dramatists, will be seen at the Garrick Theatre, Detroit, during the coming week in eight representative plays from his permanent repertoire of twelve. He will open his engagement in his Shakespearean masterpiece, "Macbeth" and close it with his interpretation of Shylock in "The Merchant of Venice". Tuesday will be offered "Romeo and Juliet", Wednesday matinee "The Merchant of Venice", Wednesday evening "Richelieu", Thursday "King Lear", Friday "King John", and Saturday matinee "Hamlet".
Mr. Mantell is regarded as easily the best "Macbeth" that has been seen on the stage in this country in a quarter of a century, and no English speaking star even in the old world in late years, has given a performance of the barbarous Thane that has been so much admired as his. Mr. Mantell's "Hamlet" is the result of twenty years of study and experiment. It has been one of the favorite plays in his repertoire from the beginning of his career as a classic star. In the great scene in "Richelieu" in which the Cardinal saves the heroine by drawing around her the magic circle of the Church of Rome, Mr. Mantell is credited with a piece of acting such as has seldom been seen on the stage of this country.
