$1045.16

is not the amount of our last week's sales but it is the amount of the increase of last week's sales over the corresponding week a year ago, i. e., we sold $1,045.16 more last week than we did the same week last year.

This is just an instance of how this business is increasing due to the fact that while most dealers make the claim, yet we not only claim to but do sell good Furniture, Rugs, Etc., for less than any dealer in the U. S. A., Mail Order houses, Removal Sale or any other kind of a sale not excepted. Fetch your mail order catalog, ads of special sales, etc., and let us prove to you that we sell for less.

To Pontiac and Oakland County People

While the great bulk of our sales are to Detroit and Highland Park people, yet we can save you just as much as we can them on Furniture, etc.

I know you have stores in Pontiac but as they do not begin to do the business we do they cannot buy in such large quantities and therefore buy as low as we do and their selling expenses are also very much higher than ours.

The Only Store of Its Kind in the U. S. A.

At a directors' meeting of the largest furniture factory in Michigan their traveling men who cover the United States, were asked to find out if there were not other stores located in the suburbs of large cities who made such big sales in the adjacent big city as this store does, with instructions to get after their business. They were unable to find any who were doing a business like we do.

An Unequaled Combination

Thus you see no other dealer has such a combination for low prices—a city store's volume of sales at a suburban store's expenses. We buy in solid carloads, we take factory over-stocks, etc., thus buying at the very lowest prices, taking the best cash discounts and with our expenses being next to nothing we can save you an amount on Furniture, Rugs, etc., almost beyond belief. Call or send for one of our big monthly circulars.

We pay the freight or deliver to your door.

INVESTIGATION OF "SLUSH FUND"

ACTION RESULT OF ACCUSATIONS AND CHARGES AT LANSING.

GOVERNOR WANTS ALL FACTS

Legislature Starts Probe of Railroad Lobby in Connection With Decried Rate Legislation.

Lansing—Persistent hints, indirect accusations, veiled charges and damaging rumors centering about the passenger rate increase bill before the Michigan legislature and having as substance the imputation that a $200,000 "slush fund" was being used by the companies to corrupt the legislature, culminated in a resolution and all persons interested therein.

Senator Alton T. Roberts, of Marquette, millionaire mine owner and newspaper publisher, sponsored the resolution in the senate, and Representative Albert E. Petermann, of Houghton, general counsel of the Calumet & Hecla Mining company, championed it in the house. The resolution came as a dramatic sequel to the one entered Thursday by Representative Charles D. Symonds, of Menominee, pillorying Railroad Commissioner Charles S. Cunningham for having publicly supported the railroad companies in their plea for higher passenger fares.

Governor Ferris has refused to condemn Cunningham before the entire matter has been thoroughly thrashed out and has urged the legislature to go to the bottom of the affair. He has also hinted that he will do some investigating on his own hook.

The sessions began Monday and are being held in the executive parlors. A large number of newspaper men and railroad officials have been summoned to appear and give testimony. The five members of the senate and the five members of the house, constituting the joint committee appointed were named Saturday morning. Members of the senate committee are: Senator Alton T. Roberts, chairman, and Senators John Damon of Mt. Pleasant, James A. Murtha of Detroit, Edgar A. Plank of Berrien county, and Fred Woodworth of Huron county.

The house committee consists of Representative William H. Moore of Palmyra, chairman, and Representatives Newell Smith of Gratiot, M. L. Evans of Coldwater, John G. Martin of Holland, Oscar James Murtha was elected chairman of the joint committee, after Senator Roberts had declined the job. Representative Moore was chosen secretary.

Jimmie's Easter Prophecy

By F. A. MITCHEL

Markham is a fishing town on the New England coast. In the olden time all the men there were sailors, but when steam finally took the romance out of sailing the Markham men turned their attention to fishing, though in these days the pleasure is given up to city people on their summer outings.

In those days when sailors loved to bound over the bilboes under full sail Ralph Husted was one of them. He loved the ocean and he loved Markham Dixon as well. He won her with the understanding that he would as soon as he had accumulated a nest egg cease making long voyages and find some employment on shore. But children came as fast as the nest egg grew, and Husted became a captain before he set any time for spending the rest of his life with his family. Then he promised them that after one more voyage he would grant what they all so much desired.

One October day he started on what he intended should be his last voyage. He had paid for his home and had some money fill the bank. On this last trip he expected to add enough to his possessions to be able to get on even if he had no vocation, but he was still a young man and counted on making an additional income that would enable him to educate his children and start them in life. But he started on this last voyage with his intentions. His wife suggested that he refrain from tempting fate again on the ocean, and his children clamored for papa "to stay at home and not go away so long any more." He was urged away from them, assuring them that he would soon return, would bring the children many pretty things and would then remain with them.

In December a vessel came in to Markham and brought the supercargo of Captain Husted's vessel. He reported that it had collided with another ship in a fog and gone to the bottom. The boats were saved and some of the crew left the vessel in them. The supercargo had begged the captain to leave in the same boat with him, but he chose to the tradition that a master must go down with his ship. He charged the supercargo if he got safely to land to say goodby for him to his wife and children and tell them how well he loved them.

This was a great shock to Mrs. Husted and the older children. The youngest, Jimmie, a boy of six—knew nothing of death, and he could not understand what had happened to his father. They could only tell him that he would never see papa any more, and even then this he could hardly grasp with his underdeveloped mind.

One morning at Sunday school his teacher read to him accounts of those raisings from the dead mentioned in the Bible. Jimmie went home to his mother and, without her what he had heard, asked why papa could not also be brought back to them from the dead.

His mother turned away from him to hide her tears and without reply. When Easter drew near Jimmie was told the story of the resurrection of Christ; that Easter was celebrated in memory of that resurrection. He was much moved by the recital, for he said that if one could return to life on the earth why not one who had been lost on the ocean? Returning to his mother, he told her the story his teacher had given him, adding:

"Next Sunday is Easter, mamma, and I shouldn't wonder if papa would come back to us on that day."

The mother tried to explain to him that it would be impossible for his papa to return on Easter Sunday or at all, but his brain was too small to grasp her meaning. He had got it in his head that Easter was the day on which one who was dead would return to life, and the idea became associated with his father.

"Don't cry, mamma," he said. "Next Sunday is the day when dead persons come back, and I know that papa will come to us."

The mother took her boy in her arms and wished that she might have faith as a little child. On that Easter morning the birds were breaking out in the sunshine. Jimmie was dressed in his best clothes for his Sunday school, but when it was time to go he was missing. He had caught sight of a sail out on the horizon and was sure that his papa was on the vessel and was coming home. No one knew where Jimmie had gone so they went to Sunday school and to church without him.

When they returned the boy was still missing. His older brother said that a ship had come in and quite likely the child had gone to the dock. At that moment through a window all saw a man, coming up from the shore with a boy in his arms.

"It's Jimmie!" said one. Then there was a shout and a rush for the comers, for Captain Husted, who had come in on the ship, was carrying Jimmie. All clung to the father, covering him with kisses.

"I told you papa would come today," said Jimmie proudly. Captain Husted had gone down with his ship, had come up, clung to wreckage and was picked up by a passing ship. Jimmie's faith in his father's return on his Easter Sunday was the talk of the village, and many a sermon was preached with it as its theme. Jimmie being held up as an illustration of a child's faith.
