The Moral Life,
Moral principle is not thinking the right thing, but doing it. It is giving it ounces to the pound and 36 inches to the yard. It is treating your neighbor kindly. It is not worrying others. There are some people who pride themselves on bolding to high moral principle, who are an exceeding, great annoyance to the people they med. Of all the unprincipled things in this world, making people unhappy is the meanest. Yet there are many people who are sticklers to moral duty, doing that very thing every day. He is a mean thief who will take from another his peace of mind. One man told us he didn't sleep a whole night because of a needless rumark a thoughtless he didn't sleep a whole night because of a needless rumark a thoughtless he didn't sleep a whole night because of a needless rumark a thoughtless and could be a supplied to the confirmed materialist that, they think you can only do harm tog man by litting him with a cith or fleening his chickens. Stand In Solitary Grandeur, But Lack Nothing That Makes for Comfort of Traveler.

You may climb up the heights by the aid of railways, funiculars, racke-and-pinlons, diligences and stedges, and when nothing but your own feet will take you any further you will see in Switzerland a grand hotel, magic-ally and incredibly raised aloft in the mountains.

ally and incredibly raised aloft in the mountains.

It is solitary—no town, no houses, nothing but this hotel hemmed in on all sides by snowy crags and made impregnable by precipies and treacherous snow and ice.

At the great redrawing of the map of Europe, when the lesser nationalities are to disappear, the Switzers will take armed refuge in their farthest grand hotels and there dety the mandates of the concert.

For the hotel, no matter how remote it be, lacks nothing that is mentioned in the dictionary of confort. Beyond its walls your life is not worth twelve bours' purchase.

You would not die of hunger, because you would perish of cold.

At best you might hit on some peasant's cottage in which the standards of existence had not changed for End of the present of the present's conservations.

area of existence and not changed for a century.

But once pass within the portals of the grand hotel, and you become the spoiled darling of an intricate organi-zation that laughs at mountains, ava-lanches and frost.

ONE OF NATURE'S MARVELS

reat Stone Face of the Pyrences Has Entranced Artists From All Parts of the World.

There is probably no more remark-ably example of natural statuary in the world than the famous stone face of the Pyrence, in Spain. The eleva-tion stands alone, sarrounded by val-leys so that the profile dominates the abyline for many miles modeled, white the lips seem to be tightly compressed. The line representing the nose is drawn with a strong bold stroke, giv-ing it a truly Casullian character. The mountain with this singular con-tour rises so high above the surround-ing country that it may be seen for many miles. It is, besides, modeled on such heroic lines that the appear-ance of foliage, even the growth of forest, does not alter the lifelike ap-pearance throughout the seasons.
