Doctor In the Kitchen*

By Laurence M. Hursh, M.D.
Consultant, National Dairy Council

A challenge for mother—but a pleasant one—is this business of good lunches for children during summer vacation. School-age youngsters usually have benefited during the year from the school lunch programs that abound in many, though not all, schools. It's up to mother to do as well in preparing interesting and nourishing lunches during the summer.

A pushover you say? Well, perhaps. Certainly, the children have been eating lunch at home on weekends all during the school year. And admittedly, some don't take advantage of school lunch anyway, preferring to carry their own from home or, regrettably, to neglect entirely the school lunch situation.

Whatever, there are standards for good lunches, scaled to your child's nutritional needs. And surveys show that the observance of good nutrition is not necessarily a matter of having the money to buy lots of food. Some of our wealthiest families, it turns out, eat the poorest diet—consumers too much good in many instances and shockingly, in other instances not getting the nutrients one needs simply because of ignorance or carelessness.

But to get to the matter at hand—vacation-time lunches. The younger children will need their meals prepared for them,

These Tips Make Easy Vacations

By JOYCE TOTEN

Getting ready for vacation is on many a homemaker's mind these days. Choosing where to go and making reservations have probably been done long ago, but now there is a hurry of putting clothes in order, packing, closing the house, and a dozen other last minute chores.

On the day of departure, nearly every homemaker is bound to feel hurried, but she needn't feel hurried if she knows how to plan ahead.

Using up all perishable foods on hand just before vacation without serving "scrappy" meals in one of the slickest tricks of the homemaker art, but it can be done.

The secret? Serve a Smorgasbord Dinner. Here's what you do. Survey the foods in the refrigerator; chances are there isn't one too small to be used. (At a smorgasbord, don't you eat only small servings of many different things?)

If the foods have been covered carefully, they'll retain their original texture and flavor very well and after a little glamorizing won't even be recognized. With a bit of thought any leftover food can be fitted into the menu, but here's an example to illustrate:

Smorgasbord Dinner

Tomato Soup Topped with Crumbled Crisp Bacon
Toast Sticks and Crackers
Tiny Swedish-American Meat Balls
Twin Chicken or Ham-Loaves
Buttered Caraway Noodles
Cabbage-Carrot Slaw
Mushroom Sauce
Kidney Bean Salad
Crisp Relishes
Frosted Fruit and Cream Bubbles

Many homemakers who in the past have relied on a neighbor to care for their house plants during vacation trips are now solving this problem the modern way—with plastic wrap.

Just water thoroughly, then overwrap top in a large sheet of saran, smoothing it to the sides and cinching the wrap loosely around the base of the plant. Do not close off the soil surface completely since plant roots need some air.

Place wrapped pot in a semi-shaded and cool spot; soil moisture will remain at an optimum level for several weeks. Now that you're ready to leave and have checked your list to be sure you have done everything, remember to take a batch of these cookies with you for munching.

Layer Bars
1/2 to 1 stick butter or margarine, melted
1 c. crushed vanilla wafers or graham crackers
1 1/2 oz. can flaked coconut
1 6 oz. pkg. semisweet chocolate bits
1 6 oz. pkg. butterscotch pieces
1 c. chopped nuts
1 can sweetened condensed milk

Melt butter or margarine in a 9x12x2-inch baking pan. Sprinkle a layer of crumbs over butter; sprinkle coconut over crumbs. Layer chocolate pieces, butterscotch pieces and broken nuts over crumbs. Pour condensed milk over all and spread evenly. Bake at 325 to 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Cut into squares while warm, but not hot. Yield: 2 dozen.

Have a Happy Vacation!

LIVER PASTE

1/2 dried parsley
1 t. onion, chopped
1/4 c. celery, finely chopped
2 T. mayonnaise

Bleed liverwurst and eggs together. Add remaining ingredients; blend well. Use as a spread on assorted crackers for appetizers.
