

It's Foolish to Suffer

You may be brave enough to stand backache, or headache, or dizziness. But if, in addition, urination is disordered, look up Doan's Kidney Pills. If you don't try to fix your sick kidneys, you may fall into the clutches of kidney trouble before you know it. But if you live more carefully and help your kidneys with Doan's Kidney Pills, you can stop the pains you have and avoid future danger as well.

A Michigan Case

James F. Reed, 777 Portage St., Kalamazoo, Mich., says: "I had a sharp twinge through my back and felt weak and nervous. My ankles were so badly swollen I couldn't wear a shoe. My back got stiff, too. The first box of Doan's Kidney Pills helped me and three boxes fixed me up all right."

The Real Hardship

"When I read about old men falling over in the trenches I feel like saying, 'This is de life!'" remarked Frank Sim.

"Right you are, bo," answered his pal. "Der's worse 'tugs dan travellin' about de country in empties. I guess."

"Sure. An' dem poor devils over in Europe not only has to live in trenches, but dey has to dig 'em out!"

If You Need a Medicine

You Should Have the Best

Although there are hundreds of preparations advertised, there is only one that really stands out pre-eminent as a remedy for all diseases of the kidneys, liver and bladder.

Dr. Pierce's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything.

A sworn certificate of purity is with every bottle. You may receive a sample bottle of Dr. Pierce's Swamp-Root.

GETTING A START

By NATHANIEL C. FOWLER, Jr.

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

THE BEST PLACE.

The mountain top is small. There is hardly room enough there for the few who reach its height; and, unless those who do keep a firm foothold, they may be pushed off and dashed to pieces by the falling rocks.

The way to the mountain top is steep and rugged, the rocks are slippery, and the path is full of landfalls.

The valley is broad and fertile, and there is room enough there for planting and for harvesting.

The ordinary man can earn his living in the valley; the extraordinary man may be able to attach himself to the mountain top.

I am not asking you, young man, not to travel upward, nor am I suggesting that you forever remain on the plains; but I am attempting to picture the dangers of steep climbing, and the liability of not being able to find a foothold at the top.

Better, far better, be a good tiller of the soil down in the green valley than to starve among the mountain's rocks.

These days of strenuous business, of liberal education, and of opportunity, the old adage that "there is always room at the top" is not as true as it used to be, for, even though there may be room at the very top, one must take fearful chances in climbing, and he will meet strenuous men en route, ready and anxious to win, not only by advancing themselves, but by pushing others down.

The tendency to go beyond one's ability, to occupy positions unnatural and difficult to hold, is responsible for many a failure, and has ruined many men who would have been successful had they been contented and industrious, with good prospect of prosperity.

Ambition should be made of sterner stuff than that which drives a man out of himself into unknown regions, or into places too high for him to gain a foothold, a footing which, even if he does gain it, he may be unable to keep.

It is your duty to do your best, to make the most of yourself, to encourage rather than to cramp ambition, to use common sense in the making of yourself, that brand of good sense which is not exclusive, but which lowers your level and which will prevent you from striving to go beyond it.

Thousands of men move from where they are dissatisfied and disgruntled, and enter new and unknown fields, and when they have remained at home, making the best of their opportunities, they would have been worth more to themselves and to the world.

Where you are sure that you are in the place for you to be in, and until you know of a location within the probable scope of your capacity.

Beware of the top, unless there is a safe road leading up to it.

Fighters Who Never See a Battle

During a sea fight the engineer-men tend the great engines of a battleship with all the care that they would bestow upon the same delicate and mighty mechanism in time of peace, roaming listlessly, yet with a definite purpose, around the engine room with oil cans in hand, bestowing drops of lubricant here and there as required.

There and the stokers' is almost—almost—the hardest part of the whole grim drama of a naval battle, for they are absolutely cut off from the fight, and are only cognizant of it by the quivering of their ship as the great turbines over their heads fire, or as the enemy's shells thud against the armor, or when some stray shot finds its way through the steel wall and strikes the bunkers to the boilers. Such an event blends a whole stockhold in one frenzied orgy of death—death by exploding shell and scattering fragments of steel; death by awful death by suffocating, burning coils, or death by scalding, hissing, blinding steam as the water tubes burst all around them.

Boy Critics

For many years the boys of Trinity college, Dublin, made and unmade the reputation of operatic stars. They always sat in the highest gallery, and were recognized as the real critics of an opera. "I remember," says a friend of the boys, "that one day, when the tenor McCuekin, the well-known English tenor, 'there was a fellow, Thomas' or some such name, whose career was blighted by a single gallery boy. Thomas was anything but graceful. He had but one gesture, which consisted in bringing first one, then the other hand to his heart and letting it fly back straight before him. It was very much like the sort of motion a man would make if he deep water. (So sang an Irish love song, working his arms as described. When he finished voice from the gallery burst the silence. 'Ah, Mister Thomas, you ain't mook of a singer, but I'll wager you'd make a fine swimmer.' The audience screamed with delight. Thomas had to leave the stage."

DAIRY FACTS

MAKING BUTTER FOR MARKET

Among Other Things Necessary is Up-to-Date Equipment—Absolute Cleanliness is Essential.

As the great body of farmers more and more take up the production and sale of milk to be shipped out of the country, there will be an ever-widening opportunity for those who prefer to do that kind of work, and are competent to do it, to make butter for sale in town and even right around among their neighbors.

There are some parts of the country which dispose of nearly all their milk to the condenners or else sell it for shipment to the large business and residence sections. This, of course, makes it practically impossible for any farmer who follows this method of disposing of his milk to make or secure butter enough for his own home use. It is a serious handicap sometimes, and prevents the use of dairy butter in the home.
