DOES OVERWORKING PAY?

The farmer who overworks to give himself an opportunity to retire is on the wrong track. Moderate work as long as a man lives will be happiness throughout life, while fifty years of overwork plus twenty years of doing nothing will just about ruin the life of the best farmer who ever lived. The farm is the best place on earth on which to retire and good health is the most important asset of the retiree. Overwork means ruined health and the city is no place for a farmer to retire. A man to be happy must have some work to do. It need not be heavy work but the man past his prime who still has some duties with the poultry and garden will get out into the air and remain active after the "do nothing retired farmer" has closed up his books forever.

Overworking is more often the result of too many jobs half done rather than a few jobs done well. The few jobs well done will times out of ten bring more profit than a lot of poorly done work, so what is the use of overworking for nothing. The farmer with 500 acres may not have much time to care for more than 200. Three hundred might as well go to the market. The farmer with 200 acres may be steadily performing his own work and the work of the hired man whom he hasn't hired yet. The result is overwork and it doesn't pay. Eighty acres more intensively farmed would reduce the heavy work and possibly as much money would be made on the farm if the interest on the investment should be subtracted from the profits.

On a farm there is practically no limit to the work that can be done if a man has the inclination and the strength. The trouble comes right here. There is no limit to the work but there is a limit to the strength and the man who has ruined his health through overwork is the man who did not know when he had reached his limit until it was too late. I know of one farmer who is over fifty years old who is now peevishly bossing a couple of hired men and feeling unhappy because he is unable, because of the doctor's orders, to perform one stroke of manual labor. I know another farmer with 160 acres who is now walking the streets of a nearby city and living in a small rented house because he is unable to stand any of the work on the farm. He has plenty of money but no work to make life interesting. Both of these men worked like tigers and knocked off fifteen years of their working period in a mad rush to save expense and pile up money. They are now retired intellectually and physically. They left their work half done because they tried to finish it too soon.

There is plenty of laziness in this world and a lot of men need no encouragement to rest, but at the same time a lot of men who need the rest never take it. Overwork has never paid except in checks on the bank of poor health. A man must always work as long as he lives, to be happy, so what's the use of trying to finish the job too soon.

Petitions have been filed with the secretary of state making Henry Ford a candidate for the Republican nomination for president of the United States at the April primaries and unless Mr. Ford asks to have his name withdrawn it will appear on the ballot.

We print auction bills and print them right. The prices are reasonable too. Let us have that job of yours.

Those liars in the "want column" don't cost much, but they do the business.

STILL WORSE.
"My life has been full of disappointments!" said the lank and horse-faced man. "I have never been able to achieve my cherished ambitions or obtain the things I most earnestly desired. As you say—"
"Huh!" returned the man on whose brow sat despair like a brooding hen on her nest. "I am worse off than that! My rich uncle left me his biggest motor car and nothing for its upkeep!"—Chicago City Star.

Business Man Praise
Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy

Successful Merchant After Investigation
Found a Remedy That Restored His Health.

"This is Thanksgiving day in the state of Pennsylvania and I want to devote a part of it in writing a letter to you. On the 25th day of November, I was stricken with a heart trouble. My family physician called it Angina Pectoris. I had from one to five attacks a day. In the latter part of November, 1910, I wrote to the Miles Medical Co. for information concerning my case, and in reply I received a very kind and instructive letter, which I handed to my family doctor, and he told me to use your remedies in connection with the medicine he gave me. I did. I used five bottles of Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy and seven bottles of Dr. Miles' Nervine. I was confined to the house for about four months. The action of my heart is now, and has been normal for the last six months. I can truly recommend Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy and Nervine to do what they are intended for. If used according to directions, I thank you kindly for your advice in answer to my monthly reports. I am now sixty-seven years of age, have been in the mercantile business for thirty-five years and lived retired for the last thirteen years."
