families by the name of Lester, Todd and Spalding. As yet no road had been cut through from Detroit, so they came by a roundabout Indian trail to Mt. Clemens, where Mr. Allen left his family and proceeded to Pontiac. That city was then inhabited only by Indians and the forest furnished the only shelter. His first night's lodging was beside a log near the bend in the Clinton river west of Saginaw street. In January 1819 Mr. Allen moved his family to Pontiac, having constructed a log hut. The timbers were hewed with axes. These pioneers were different to the caucus this did r at the small staken notion in the subject out.
