MOORE VICTIMS OF M'GEE HILL

One Car Hits Iron Railing Bridge the other off the Embankment—No One Seriously Injured.

Last Saturday night the Erwin brothers, in their auto, made a daring leap from the embankment foot of the McGee hill -we understand, however, it was not garrige for repairs.

Sunday afternoon about 4 o'clock a large automobile, carrying two young men, went dashing down the McGee hill, and as they reached the curve at the foot they lost control of the machine, and it went crashing into the iron railing at the ar proach to the bridge

Fortunately the railing saved the machine from leaping over the embankment where, had that hapdened, the occupants would no doubt have landed in the water, it nothing more serious had occured. When the crash came the machine whirled entirely around standing almost directly facing the south. The occupants jumped and foot was lamed from leaping out of

A number of spectators viewed the accident, and very soon help and other machines arrived from both ways, and intense interest prevailed.

The machine was soon pried and pulled away from the iron work and run down north of the bridge for repairs, where the damage was found to be confined principally to the fender and one front wheel. After a delay of two hours the machine was repaired enough to enable the young men to start out homeward bound.

The driver said they had never tiser. traversed the road before, and were very much surprised to see the sharp curve at the bottom of the bill, and much alarmed, as their brakes were not working good.

Prehaps a red flag by day and a red light by night placed part way down the grade would serve as Soon there will be interurban cars broke in two and face, badly bruising it, and break

Young Raynard was standing on the track back of the car when the early, Donald McLeon caught a seven pound pike. In the pike's mouth was a blue gill weighing down and striking him a fierce one pound and in the blue gill's mouth was a small perch. It took three hours to laud this remarkable. he fell to the ground unconscious.

He was picked up and efforts to revive him failing, Leon Green, who had his machine at the car barns, brought him to this village, but both physicians being out of town, he drove to Redfor!, where nedical assistance was rendered but all efforts at reviving him were the home of friends in North Farmington. Raynard did not regain consciousness until about 8 o'clock

A Painful Accident.

Harold Measell, of Pontiac, aged 3 years, was painfully wounded a ew days ago when a friend accidentally discharged a 22 calibre rifle in his face, the bullet striking his teeth and glaucing across the mouth, where it embedded itself in the jawbone, preventing a more serious result.

Harold is the youngest brother of Mrs. Bert Gates, of this village, and is recovering rapidly.

If you are contemplating buying a Ford you had better get your orders in at once, as the company is greatly behind in their orders at the present time. See Carl Ely at the Park Garage.

A. D. B. VanSandt, publicity agent for the Detroit United railway has just issued a neat illustrated folder descriptive of the many beauty spots along its lines from Detroit to Pontiac, Pontiac to Northville, Wayue and back to the city. The ride over this route is a delightful one and gives the tourist a glimpse of some of the most picturesque scenery in this part of the country.
