A 300 POUND SUN FISH.

Fishermen in the employ of the Western Fish Company made a remarkable catch 15 miles outside the Heads the other day. While fishing from the Farragut they felt a hard tug on one of the lines and a few minutes later hauled on deck a giant sunfish.

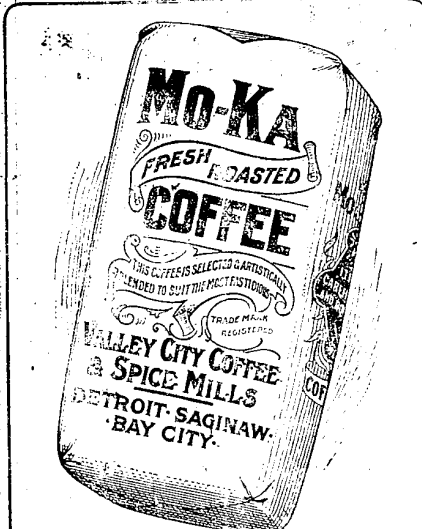

The fish weighed 300 pounds and measured five feet in length. As might be expected, he put up a hard fight. Sunfish are rarely captured off this coast, as they are natives of Japan. The big fish attracted a world of attention along the waterfront when placed on exhibition.—San Francisco Chronicle.

BURYING CABLES.

It seems odd that telegraph and telephone companies should be forced to bury their cables in the bed of a large river, yet this became necessary in places along the Ohio during the recent drought. The river was so low that boys could and did play ball in the very channel bed, and the exposure left the telephone cables entirely unprotected. To avoid a repetition of the incident, therefore, the companies are now digging trenches in the river bed, in which the cables will be laid and securely covered.

WHERE MUSHROOMS ARE CHEAP.

Mushrooms, which are considered such a delicacy in the swell upper restaurants and cafes, are ordinary eating in the little Italian table d'hotes down town and on the east side. A boy sits by a great table full of them, piled high, preparing them for the spaghetti dressing and orders as he would potatoes. On Grand street an order of mushrooms, which at Delmonico's would cost into the dollars, is to be had for 20 cents. Quite as well cooked, too, if not a little better, perhaps.—New York Sun.
