JUSTICE IN SMALL COURTS

Blind Goddess Evidently Properly Attended to by Lesser St. Louis Dignitaries.

The St. Louis Bar association wants a new system of justices' courts, or a new lot of justices of the peace. The lawyers say that in these courts suits involving considerable amounts are frequent and there is a demand for judicial poise and legal knowledge.

That's the way with lawyers. They have no patience with the rough-and-ready sort of justice that is delivered in the poor man's court. They want technicalities, and pleadings, and delays, and fees, all of which contribute to the lawyers' incomes. But justice is done in these small courts. A south side resident is authority for the fact that justice is done in them frequently. "You ought to see justice come in contact with one of those courts," he said. "She gets done all right. Every justice is a regular Packy McFarland."—St. Louis Republic.

SOMETHING ABOUT PEAFOWL.

India is the real home of the peafowl. In that country they are hunted, and their flesh is used for food. As they live in the same region as the tiger, hunting them is dangerous sport. The long tail of the peafowl is really not its tail, but feathers that grow out just above it, and are called tail-coverts. This bird has been known for ages. It is mentioned several times in the Bible. The ancient Romans considered the brains of the peafowl a dainty tidbit, and used to kill thousands of them to get the brains for the emperor's feast.
