THE MAJESTY of the Canadian countryside is captured on a snow train journey.

snow train

Looking for something different to do on an up-and-coming winter weekend?

How about a drive to Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, to board a train for a one-day winter wilderness scenic ride through some of Ontario's most rugged terrain.

The Algoma Central Railway takes weekend sightseers into the Agawa

Canyon on an eight-hour train ride.

Begun in 1971, as a pilot project, the train carried 1200 patrons during its first season. Last year approximately 10,000 persons enjoyed the tour. This year, the Snow Train which had previously run only on Saturday and Sunday will also make the trip on Friday.

The train, restricted in length for safe winter operation, has 12 passenger cars carrying 60 persons each and makes the trip into the canyon complete with two dining cars.

Persons wishing to make the scenic train ride are advised to make advance telephone reservations with the Algoma Central Railway before leaving home. Phone: (705) 254-4331 between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. Monday through Friday. No deposit is required.

Starting point for the 240-mile round-trip journey is the Canadian Sault, just six hours drive from the Observerland area by car.

The trip as explained in a past issue of the Automobile Club of Michigan's Motor News states, that the Algoma Snow Train "moves through virgin forests interlaced with lakes and streams disturbed only by a thin ribbon of steel."

AMONG THE MAJOR POINTS of interest are two waterfalls along the Agawa Canyon's 600-foot-high walls and the trestle over the Montreal River. The curved trestle carries the train 130 feet above the river bed and stretches 1,550 feet from bank to bank.

Fare for the snow train is $10 for adults and $5 for children and high-school students. Children under five years old ride free.

The train leaves the Canadian Sault depot each Friday, Saturday and Sunday at 8:30 a.m. (EST) and arrives back at 4:30 p.m.
