Lawn Pests Resist

Just as resistant strains of the housefly developed after DDT was used everywhere, so have some lawn pests, such as webworm and Japanese beetle grubs, acquired immunity in certain areas to chlordane or other insecticides.

In some cases the resistant strain experiences a population explosion, the pesticide killing predators but no longer the pest.

A similar situation seems to occur with turf diseases, some of which are no longer controlled by formerly effective fungicides.

Apparently fungi, too, compete, and when a susceptible fungus is controlled by other resistant to the fungicide may flourish better than ever. As useful as the long-lasting systemic fungicides are in stopping stripe smut and dollarspot, leafspot disease frequently becomes more severe where they are used!

One of the safest as well as most effective means for fighting lawn diseases is to use grass varieties bred for disease-resistance. Aside from good looks, disease-resistance is the characteristic most sought for in lawngrass breeding programs.

It all began with Merion, which, even after many years of widespread planting, still does not succumb to leafspot.

More recent highly-touted bluegrasses tolerant of most diseases are Adelphi, Baron, Bonnieblue, Fyking, Galaxy, Nugget, Penmar, Sodco and Sydsport. Others such as Arboratum, Arista and Prato are momentarily attacked but recover well.

Starting a lawn with today's handsome, disease-resistant varieties should reduce up-keep. Sod of such selections will not ordinarily require fungicidal sprays.

Garden Chatter

One pound beefsteak tomatoes and 10 pound zucchini! Can you top that?

Mrs. Jessie Lampe of 28964 Leona in Garden City has several five pound zucchinis in her garden but one, 18 inches long, weighed in at 10 pounds.

John Johnson's beefsteak tomatoes are the largest he's ever had in his garden at 1514 Nola in Livonia. Several have hit the one pound mark.

Pest Of The Week

Small green or brown sucking leafhoppers are becoming increasingly damaging this year.

They breed in the grass and can be seen flying about as the grass is disturbed. Most of our ornamentals (trees, shrubs, and flowers) are being damaged this year.

They seem to be particularly damaging on honey locust, redbud, mountain ash, and all maples - plus many lower plants and vines (grape, lupines, phlox, mums, etc.).

Leaves yellow or turn brown at the edges; petioles and stems are distorted often causing complete or partial loss of the new growth. On maples it is often called leafhopper burn. They are rather small but can be seen flying about when leaves or branches are disturbed.

CONTROL: Spray foliage of trees, shrubs, and flowers covering upper and lower surfaces with 57% Emulsifiable Malathion two teaspoons per gallon, plus two tablespoons per gallon, one 50% Wettable Sevin. Diazinon may be used in place of Malathion for slightly longer residual action.

Use Planter As A Sandbox

A combination planter bed and sandbox built of 2x4-inch western cedar or fir can be adapted to fit almost any yard situation or size.

The planter and play areas are separated by a screen of spaced 1x2s set on 2x4 stringers and 4x4-inch posts, to keep kids and children out of the plants.

Sides of the boxes are 2x4s, four high for the planter and three high for the sandbox.

They're nailed to 2x4 cedar stakes driven into the ground three feet apart.

A cup of 2x4s laid flat runs around planter and sandbox, providing a place for tots to sit. The wood should be preservative treated to prolong life.

When children have outgrown the sandbox, it converts to another planter box and the wood screen can be used for climbing plants.
