

Take Heart All Short Haired Men. Your Hair Style Is Coming Back

Is short hair coming back into style?

Nick Gulyas, owner of the Livonia Mall Barber shop for the past 30 years seems to think so.

The east and west coasts of the country usually are two years ahead of Michigan with introducing new styles, and the shorter styles have already been in existence for over a year now. Only about 15% of Nick's customers ask for their hair cut below their ears. Another 35% of the male customers still prefer to have their hair touching their ears, and about half of all the children and adults have the hair cut either above the ears or in a style that allows them to comb their hair over the ears.

After hiding for such a long time, the ears are becoming exposed again. Hopefully, hearing will be improved.

A NEW DIMENSION

Barbers are doing more and more besides just cutting hair. They are into acid-balanced and organic shampoos, hair conditioners, moisturizing creme, and acid-balanced hair sprays, which are used and recommended in the Mall Shop. The sales of hair care products have tripled since a year ago.

SOME POPULAR STYLES

Some of the popular cuts are called "Shag." The layer cut, and the radial cut. These cuts are styled shorter on the top, which adds body. This gives a fuller look and can be parted on either side, or in the center. It can also easily be put into place by simply running the fingers through it.

A REMODELED BARBER SHOP

During March the shop was remodeled from one styling place to five. A reception room has also been added, plus a pony chair for the small children with a safety seat.

The greatest satisfaction of barbering, says Nick, comes when a customer, lady, man or child, has hair styled, shaped, combed neatly in place, changing their appearance, which makes us all feel better.

A WHITE polyester wool knit dress with a shirt collar and a plunging shirt neck with a scarf . . . a bias flared skirt and patch pockets. That's style.
