

Hadassah Plans Day At Book Fair

Tuesday, Nov. 13 is "Hadassah Day" at the Jewish Community Center's 22nd annual Book Fair when the theme will be "Challenge to Freedom."

Beginning at 10 a.m. in the Aaron DeRoy Theatre, Robert Kimmel Smith leads off the day's activities with a discussion of his new book, "Sadie Shapiro's Knitting Book."

At 1 p.m., Ken Hurwitz will comment on his current novel, "The Line of David," which describes a love affair that begins in America and ends in Israel.

Lunch will be served at noon, and reservations, at $3.50 per person, must be made before Friday, Nov. 9, through Hadassah House, 1824 W. Seven Mile, Detroit.

Mrs. Ben Elkin, of Southfield, is vice president of education, and has arranged the day's program. Mrs. Isadore Silverman and Mrs. Charles Lampert, both of Southfield, are co-chairmen for the day. Social chairmen are Mrs. Henry Schleider and Mrs. Franklin Getteson, both of Southfield.

The book fair runs from Nov. 10-18.

MR. AND MRS. GREGORY WAYNE HASS
(Kathleen Sue Ransom)

Bad Axe Farm Couple's Home

Mr. and Mrs. Gregory Wayne Hass have a farm home near Bad Axe, Mich., following their recent marriage in Our Savior Lutheran Church of Bad Axe.

Mrs. Hass is the former Kathleen Sue Ransom, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Ransom of Loveland Avenue, Livonia. Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Hass of Bad Axe are the bridegroom's parents.

The Rev. Dennis E. Glander officiated, and the bride's father gave her in marriage.

Polyester organza and alencon lace fashioned the bridal gown. The bride's veil was chapel-length nylon illusion and her flowers were yellow sweetheart roses and white mums and carnations.

Marilyn Charles of Wayne was honor attendant and the bridesmaids were Helen Ransom, the bride's sister, and Carolyn Weller of South Bend, her cousin.

They wore white dresses and pink picture hats and carried baskets of multi-colored flowers.

Brian Hass, the bridegroom's brother, was best man and guests were seated by Albert and Karl Hass, his cousins, all from Bad Axe.

The couple greeted 230 guests at a reception in the First United Methodist Church of Bad Axe before leaving for a Mackinac Island honeymoon.

The new Mrs. Hass graduated from Franklin High School in 1969 and Michigan State University in 1972 and teaches vocal music in the Uby community school district. Her husband graduated from Bad Axe High School and is self-employed.

Pair Wed In Holy Trinity

In a late afternoon ceremony in Holy Trinity Lutheran Church of Livonia, Michelle Ann Moellering and Eugene Harold Walker were united in marriage.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul C. Moellering of Milford. Mr. and Mrs. Paul C. Moellering of Milford, Mr. and Mrs. James T. Walter of Somerset Avenue, Westland, are the bridegroom's parents.

The Rev. Fred Balke heard the couple's vows, and the bride's father escorted her to the altar.

She wore an empire gown of delusered satiny with pearls and re-embroidered alencon lace on the bodice. A pearl-trimmed lace crown held her shoulder-length veil, and she carried a French bouquet of white sweetheart roses and baby's breath.

Honor attendants were Mrs. Dianne Moellering, the bride's sister-in-law, and Pam Walker, sister of the bridegroom. They wore light blue dresses.

Royal blue dresses were worn by the bridesmaids, Mrs. Julie Getz of Fort Wayne, Ind., the bride's cousin, Mrs. Jeanne Fryer of Plymouth, Diane Bowie of Livonia and Karen Schulz of Northville.

All carried blue carnations and starflowers tied with ribbons in the two shades of blue.

Bill Meyers of Westland and Tom Moellering, brother of the bride were the bridegroom's honor attendants. The ushers were Mike Moellering, another brother, Steve Getz of Fort Wayne, Bill Fryer of Plymouth and Joe Kirtzman of Livonia.

Oil Crisis

more refineries, and Kelley said they aren't doing it because it will cost them money.

Lichtman also defended the major oil companies and their ways by saying: "They are the recipients of a lot of advantages, and anybody who didn't take advantage of that would be out of their mind."

He was the first panel member to mention "inept, old, out-of-date laws that brought them to this point, and the only way we're going to change that is to get to the (U.S. House) Ways and Means Committee who write the tax law."

On the gasoline that is sold on the market today, Lichtman said, "We all line up at the same place; we all get the same product; it all comes from the same cow."

"But the product all comes from the major oil companies, and when things get tight, we (the independent branders) are the first ones to get cut off."

And he told his audience, "Don't blame the guy at the pump when the prices go up. He isn't gouging you. Thirty-five per cent of all the dealers that get started go broke, and he's paying 15.5 cents now (per gallon) in tax."

All three were convinced that prices would continue to go up, and the situation would become compounded with the projected fact that the U.S. will be demanding something like 25 million barrels of oil per day by 1980.

Tanter believes that the Arab oil strategy "seems to be to squeeze the West in general, so that the Europeans and Japanese will pressure America for a change in its policy toward Israel."

Western Europe obtains 30 per cent of its oil from the Middle East and North Africa, and Japan depends on the Middle East for 90 per cent of its oil needs.

"The Arabs simply want America to pressure Israel to withdraw from the occupied territories to its pre-1967 borders," he said.

He believes, however, that "the leverage America has on its allies is very small. The lack of leverage is true especially when that ally is on the front line of battle."
