QUIETLY AWAITING the coffin of "Dad" to be placed in the closet are Madame Rosepettle (Roz Gould) and Jonathan (Paul Sugar). Carrying the body to the closet are the maid (Tracey Rowens) and the bellboy (Perry Hammons). Action of the play takes place in Port Royale, a city somewhere in the Caribbean. (Observer photo)

Absurdist Play 'Oh Dad' Opens At Clarenceville

Clarenceville High School Thespians will present the play, "Oh Dad, Poor Dad, Momma's Hung You in the Closet and I'm Feeling So Sad," on Wednesday and Thursday, Nov. 28-29.

The play will be presented in the Louis E. Schmidt Auditorium with curtain time at 8 p.m. Admission is $1.

The play, concerned with "Momma" keeping her dead husband's stuffed body in a closet, is being presented in an experimental form of stage production called "theater of the absurd." In this form, the audience will discover that few things seem to make sense; and yet both the author's and director's intention is to be as socially philosophical with the script as possible.

An insertion of both burlesque and slapstick, as well as sincerity and tragedy, is combined here in an awkward search for reality.

Cast members are Roz Gould as Madame Rosepettle; Paul Sugar as Jonathan; Eva Poltzer as Rosalie; Brad Heller as Commande Rozzobove; Bruce Margolis as the head bellboy; Perry Hammons as the bellboy; and Tracey Rowens as the maid.

Barb Redford is the producer of the production.
