

3 cities get federal aid for traffic

Livonia, Farmington Hills and Southfield are among several communities that will share in a $459,395 federal grant for selective traffic enforcement and training programs.

The money is part of a $2.1 million federal grant to state and local governments for various traffic safety related projects.

The program, announced recently by Gov. William Milliken, is administered by the governor's office of highway safety planning.

Milliken said that "in keeping with the state's annual highway safety plan, funds have been allotted on a priority basis to several state agencies as well as a number of cities and counties for program improvements in several important areas."

Part of the grant will go to the Michigan State Police, the governor said.

A total of $10,000 will go for alcohol breath testing equipment for local communities; $49,075 for traffic accident analysis by the State Police for cities and counties; and $215,875 will go to the office of highway safety planning for planning and administration.
