NEW GASOLINE LAW

It Goes Into Effect on September First Next.

State Oil Inspector Neal calls the public's attention to a few changes made by the present legislature in the so-called "Red Can" gasoline act. The new law, which goes into effect September 1st next, provides that cans, buckets, barrels, etc., which are to be painted a bright red, may be "lettered" instead of being "stenciled" as heretofore. It also provides that retail merchants must have the barrels or tanks in their store, from which they sell, painted bright red and lettered thereon with the word gasoline.

The delivery to consumers, and to dealers as well, must be made in receptacles (cans, buckets, jugs, barrels or whatever the delivery is made in) that are painted bright red and lettered.

The tanks or cans on peddlers wagons must be painted and lettered and the tank wagons of wholesalers must be labeled if containing gasoline.

The person who purchases gasoline lays himself liable to a fine if he has it in anything but the proper can. For cleaning purposes gasoline can only be sold in bottles properly labeled, and not more than one quart in quantity.

Advertising.

Once in a while we find a weak-kneed fellow who says "advertising doesn't pay." We never argue with such a one; it would be time lost. If he has failed to notice that all great industries and millions of smaller concerns in this country have been built up to prosperity by advertising, why he is beyond hope. If advertising does not pay, why is it our most successful business men are our largest and most persistent advertisers? The trouble is the doubtful one drops due drop of advertising into the great ocean and expects to stir it to its depths. Keeping thoughtfully, truthfully and everlastingly at it is the way to get astonishing result.—Ex.

Tramp Question.

One of the latest attempts to deal with the tramp question is represented by a bill pending in the legislature. In substance the measure provides for the establishment of a state farm to which vagrants may be sent from any locality and put to work. The bill, which has been reported favorably in the assembly, is framed on the theory that every other plan having failed, this, if made law, may succeed in solving the hobo problem, or at least to do away with some of the worst evils resulting therefrom. It is thought possible by the scheme mapped out to reclaim the tramp, develop habits of industry by teaching him a trade and thus make him a useful citizen instead of a nuisance. The experiment may be worth trying, notwithstanding the prevalent belief that the average tramp is irreclaimable.—Ex.

Decoration Day.

Decoration Day was observed in Farmington in good old fashioned manner. The procession formed at the town hall at 1:30 p. m. headed by the Northville drum corps and marched to the Oakwood cemetery, where the graves of the departed soldiers were decorated with flags and flowers, after which they returned to the town hall, where appropriate services were held in memory of the departed. The main speakers were A. J. Crosby, Rev. Mesley, Rev. Stange and Prof. Goodrich. An interesting paper was given by Mrs. F. R. Riley. Recitations, and songs were furnished by the school children and they also took part in decorating the graves.

Death of Josiah Cox.

Josiah M. Cox, a well known resident of Farmington township, passed away at his home Thursday morning May 27, 1909, after a long and lingering illness of which he had been a victim for a number of years. He leaves a wife and seven children, Jennie Zingelmann of Collinwood, O., Edgar of Detroit, Minnie of Britton, Bertha Young of Livonia township, and Roy, Cecil and Mary at home. Besides these, five grandchildren, one brother, four sisters and a large circle of friends are left to mourn his loss.

Mr. Cox was born in Somersetshire, Eng., August 30, 1852. When seven years of age he left England and came to the township of Farmington with his parents where he spent the remainder of his life with the exception of one year, which he spent in Redford township.

Funeral services were held from the Baptist church in Farmington Sunday afternoon, conducted by Rev. N. E. Musser of Northville. The remains were placed in the Oakwood vault for an indefinite time.

Death of Frederick J. Smock.

Frederick J. Smock, father of Mrs. F. H. Bade, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. C. H. Smith, 185 Horton avenue, Detroit, Saturday morning of apoplexy. Mr. Smock had suffered from attacks of this disease for a number of years.

The funeral was held at his daughter's residence in Detroit Tuesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. Rev. Sherman Divine of the Woodward avenue Presbyterian church officiating. Interment was in Clarenceville cemetery.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to thank our friends who so kindly assisted during the burial of our father.
