

"Gold Diggers of 1933"

Oh, those "Gold Diggers of 1933." When Dick Powell starred in this movie he wasn't playing one of the gold hungry gals and most certainly he wasn't wearing any jewelry, save a pinky ring.

But 41 years later men have become conscious of jewelry again after a long draught. For years the only men who wore anything around their necks were Catholics wearing medals or clergymen wearing the signs of their religions.

And then, perhaps the war, when men had to wear those ominous dogtags, caused a long-lasting reaction against neck jewelry.

This year it's very de rigueur for a man to wear a sliver of a necklace, a handsome bracelet and, of course, rings.

American Indian men appear to be the only males on this continent to have traditionally worn jewelry throughout their history, unashamedly.

The return of the French-cuffed shirt will bring back the cuff link and collar pins used on the returning tab collar.

You'll only wear one bracelet but you can choose from many
