Leaves

Signify beauty, work

It was our first home.

"We'll have to have lots of plants," my wife said as she stood in the sunlit living room.

"Sure," I said glibly, figuring plants would be cheaper than furniture. Little did I know.

Several hundred dollars later, the entire house was filled with green, leafy plants and small trees.

I was a little worried about having to rake the living room in the fall, but my wife told me not to worry.

"The leaves won't fall off these trees," she assured me. "But those outside..."

I looked outside. In the excitement of moving, (that had been during winter) I had failed to notice all the large trees in our yard.

Trees that would sprout tons of leaves.

Leaves that would fall to the ground.

Tons of leaves.

"We're moving back to the apartment," I told my wife.

"It'll be fun; being outside, working with your hands," she said.

As it happened, I didn't have to wait for the fall to start raking. When the snow melted I discovered that the people who had lived in the house before us hadn't raked the leaves last fall.

There were tons of wet, wet leaves.

"Look at those leaves," I said to my wife, "we're moving back to the apartment."

"I'm not moving," she said very gently.

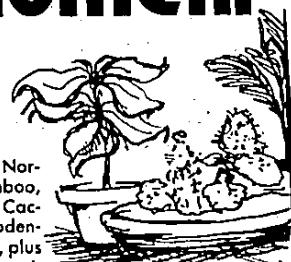

"Well neither are those leaves," I said.

It took me about two weeks to rake together and load the leaves into plastic bags.
