

The Observer & Eccentric
PEOPLE

1-C (P)

MAY 9, 1974

Co-op students stage spring fashion fling

By CRAIG NEWMAN

North Farmington's retailing and co-op classes wanted to do something different this year.

"With a great deal of cooperation and effort, we were fortunate enough to hold North Farmington's first fashion show," said June Kilmer, show coordinator and co-op department head.

The fashion show, sponsored by Mr. Marvin's and Snafu apparel shops, was held in North Farmington's auditorium last Tuesday.

Modeling the 15 different selections were North Farmington students: Lori Hamm, Julie Weston, and Mary Kate Maclaren.

Former North Farmington graduates and now professional models that participated were Chris Doelle and Marcia Lytle.

NORTH JUNIORS Lisa Bauer and Jennifer Clarke served as show commentators.

According to Mrs. Kilmer, "The retailing classes did most of the promotional work, they also helped out with the actual production."

Mrs. Kilmer pointed out, "This entire production would not have been possible if we did not get the cooperation from all the people involved."

Norman Dickson, North's assistant principle, added, "A great deal of effort and hard work went into this production."

ALSO HELPING out Mrs. Kilmer with the arrangements were Eleanor Townsend, retailing instructor, and Gloria Spencer, coordinator from both sponsoring stores.

Mrs. Spencer said, "Our objective was to do something different, something that more than just one department could get involved in."

She continued, "We also wanted to provide the students of North Farmington with a new, different type of class project."

Spring
Fash