Farmington. HILL SAID he is seeking the posi-tion because he feels the 'District Court is one of the government agencies which is closest to the people, adding that he sees it as an op-portunity to serve the public. In that case he should make a rul-ing based on the constitutionality of the law, and let a higher court either overturn or uphold the ruling.

JURY THALS are a necessary part of the judicial system, be said, adding that a trial by a jury is often more representative of the way a law-should be interpreted than a trial with just one person making the judgment. Although he does think the assistant prosecutors office is often used as a uniqueness of this statement. "I'm sure that it is something that all the people are striving for, but it is something that I feel very strongly about." "A new lawyer, in his enthusiasm," may look in places, or consider angles, that a more experienced law-yer may consider routine and over-look," he said.

CONCERNING PLEA bargaining he said, "This is where the integrity of the system comes into challenge, it is a very good concept but it must be watched carefully to see that it is not abused."

Hill graduated from Michigan State University and received his law de-gree from Wayne State University. He is a member of the State Bar of Mich-igan, and the Michigan Patent Law As-contation sociation. He has been appointed to the panel of arbitrators of the American Arbi-tration Association and in an ration Association and is an active member of various community organi-zations.

The report said that the hospital has between 24-26 interns, and the same number of residents a year.

They also have a program for clini-cal clerks, students from various uni-versities who are at the hospital for periods of six or seven weeks per
