Roosevelt History to Be Published Soon

WASHINGTON—The Roosevelt "trials cabinet" is to make one more bid for public recognition before it takes permanently to the shelf where it was laid upon the departure of its chief from the White House. Two of its most prominent members in the persons of James Rudolph Garfield, late secretary of the interior, and Clifford Pinchot, chief forester of the department of agriculture, have put their heads together and the fruits of their conferring will be a large and interesting volume entitled "Roosevelt's Administration."

It is whispered about Washington that other members of the now famous aggregation of comparatively young Federal officials and all special hunters from all over the West who, Mr. Roosevelt invited by committee status to his council room, lumber table and tennis court, are preparing to give the public some insight into the great story of the history of the administration recently closed. Mr. Garfield and Mr. Pinchot, however, are the first to be actually discovered at their task.

ONION CULTURE HOLDS THIRD PLACE IN CROPS

In One or More of Its Several Forms Has Been in Use Throughout All Time of History.

—By W. R. Beattie.

The onion in one or more of its several forms has been in use throughout all time of which we have authentic history. From available records it would appear that the original home of the onion was in southern Asia or in the countries surrounding or bordering on the Mediterranean sea. During early times the onion was highly esteemed as an article of food, also as a preventive of thirst while on the march or traveling in the desert.

The onion belongs to the widely variable species Allium cepa, which forms a part of a botanical family of plants which includes many of the lilies, the several forms of asparagus and smilax, and similar plants having a scaly or fleshy enlarged root. A characteristic of this family is that most of its species grow naturally upon soil having an abundance of moisture, many of them being natives of bordering areas along the seashore. Another characteristic of plants like the onion and asparagus is that they will withstand considerable salt in the soils on which they grow. The onion is grown primarily for its bulb, however, the leaves are often employed for seasoning, and there are several kinds that are grown for their leaves only.

The onion holds third place among the truck crops grown in the United States. In 1908 about 14,000,000 bushels, valued at $10,000,000, were produced, practically all of which were consumed in this country. In addition we annually import about 1,400,000 bushels from Spain, Egypt, Per-

WANTED TO MEET HIM AGAIN

Patriarch Had Something to Say to Man Driving a Big Red Automobile.

The Stranger—That's a singular looking old fellow sitting out there on the fence. He seems quite a patriarch.

The Native—Yep. He's been sittin' 'thar fer three years.

"Three years? Good gracious! There must be an interesting story involved in this. Is he waiting for something?"

"Yep. He's waiting for a tall feller drivin' a big red automobile. He came by 'bout three years ago an' 'rann'd over th' old man's calf. The feller stopped an' said: 'What's the damage?' an' the old man said, 'Bout seven dollars, and the feller gave him a twenty one' drove on. An' th' old man's sittin' over there waitin' for him to come back."

"Eh? Poor old chap. Forgot to thank the man, I suppose. But what's he got that shotgun for?"

"The twenty th' feller gave him was bad."

REVENGE.

The Professor—I've been a vegetarian all my life; from now on I'll eat nothing but beef!

Consumption Permanently Cured.

That consumption can be permanently cured is demonstrated by some figures published by Dr. A. Van Buren of Belrhams, who says that 75 per cent. of the patients treated in the Bourgmount sanatorium in 1903-4 have continued, four years after treatment, to improve, and are in a condition to return to their regular occupations.

The Reason.

"What's the reason we shouldn't have a little cutting this Saturday?"

Congressional Club Losing Members

From into the hearts of the "would be" who have lately come to Washington to spend over congressional homes and had been led to believe that membership in the Congressional club would bring open to them the doors of every smart household in Washington.

It is a matter of the club's history that the ultra-smart women in the congressional set joined the club in the beginning because they were persistently asked the question as to whether or not women might live the organization something of the social standard it needed. These women freely paid the $10 entrance fees, with manifestly no intention of losing it, and the women who come from many rural districts throughout the country and jumped at the chance to belong to the club.

That the reality of art women in the congressional set in Washington do not care a rap for the Congressional club or its success has been made plain. True, they have been induced on rare occasions to visit the club, but not only do they not come but they have been so thoroughly displeasda and the South Sea Islands. The market for onions includes practically the entire commercial world, and the demand for a good article continues throughout the entire year.

During recent years the production of the various forms of Spanish and Bermuda onions in the Gulf coast States has become an industry in itself. Owing to the great quantity of this type of onion that can be grown upon a small area a few thousand acres will produce all that the market can handle at a profit to the grower.

The onion is exceptional in that it will thrive under a wide range of climate and soil conditions. There is perhaps no extended area in the United States, except in the mountainous regions where the onion cannot be successfully grown.

Certain types and varieties of onions, including the "top onions" and the "mufflers" or "potato onions," are extremely hardy and may remain in the open ground throughout the winters of our northern states if given slight protection. These types are, however, not adapted to the growing for the market, except as green onions "peelers," or "bunchers," to be sold during the early spring time.

The period required for the production of a crop of onions will depend upon the season, the methods employed in growing and the variety. If grown from seed, a period of from 120 to 150 days will be required. If from sets, the crop may often be matured in 100 days. If grown in the extreme northern part of the United States, where the seasons are short, the crop will mature more rapidly, in cases of secure it is advisable to give small doses, combined with laudanum.

A Rat Extirminator.

Rigdon Johnson, a farmer living near New Harmony, has a rat extirminator which he says beats a whole pack of rat dogs. Mr. Johnson's rat extirminator is a chicken snake about six feet long, and it was taken refuge in the barn and granary on the farm. All the year it waged incessant war on the rats and mice about the place and as a result of the snake's strict attention to business Mr. Johnson says he hasn't a rat or mouse on his 200 acres of land. He says he never has given instructions to members of his family not to injure or molest the snake in any way, and intends to allow it to make his home on his farm as long as it cares to remain. A chicken snake is not a thing of beauty and appears to be a very repellent, it is a black snake with white spots covering the back.

Jewish Poultrymen.

The Jewish poultry dealers of New York city have formed a poultry society to deal in poultry products which are to be prepared and marketed in conformity with the requirements of the Jewish market, selling directly to the consumer.

Castor Oil Dosing.

In administering castor oil to animals, allow one or two drops to a horse, four ounces to pigs and two ounces to calves. Castor oil is an excellent purgative, in cases of acute it is advisable to give small doses, combined with laudanum.

EXPERIENCED ADVICE

Never Buy a Watch

by Mail

No one can tell a watch by mail that keeps accurate time. The watch that keeps accurate time in your pocket, loses its value in another man's pocket.

Even the finest watch will fall as a perfect timepiece unless it is adjusted to meet the individual requirements of the person who is to carry it.

Sartoris Resigns; Family Feud Is Rumor was chosen an aide-de-camp by Maj. Gen. Pittsburgh Lee, and had become a captain when honorably mustered out of the Third United States regular infantry, at the end of the war.

In June 1867 he married Miss Germaine Olive Newland, a granddaughter of Sir Charles Halle, a distinguished English nobleman, and the marriage Mr. Sartoris joined the Catholic church.

The origin of the feud in the Grant family is not related by those of the present generation, but its existence, it is asserted, however, that the quarrel has been on for some years, and that the family is divided into two bitterly hostile camps.

The breaking out of the feud is said to have been the result of the appointment of Grant Sartoris, favorite daughter of President Grant and almost idolized by the American public at the time of her marriage to Sartoris, the British-English, during her father's stay at the White House. The other faction is led by Gen. F. D. Grant, whose popularity with the American public is a matter of more recent growth.

Interesting Pair of Glaring Senators

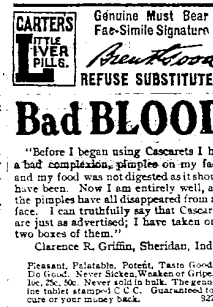

roste sides of the big question, but they are opposite in temperament, character, training, and every other respect.

Senator Aldrich bunched a few street railroads in his native state, said and resold them until he can afford to buy the best horse in the world as long as he lives. Senator La Follette carved at fame with one hand and grabbed out a lecture career with the other in order to make a living on the side. He gets money only to blow it in on his show.

Senator Aldrich has a sublime faith in the wisdom of men with money, and he fights for them as he would fight for the poor. Senator La Follette considers best for the whole country. If they prosper and are satisfied, it follows, according to his doctrine, that all must be prosperous and contented. Senator La Follette, on the other hand, of the same, is for the man who has very little money, for the one who individually works for every dollar he gets. And they stand up in the senate about six feet apart and fight it out along these lines.

These two men are not only on op-
