

Nature blooms for young, old

If you drive north on John R. road you will arrive at Bloomer State Park.

It is a park preserved, only modernized by swing sets and picnic tables. Within, hills lead to a stream and trees stand tall, unaffected by civilized bulldozers or housing developments.

It is a place for young and old, because nature is an amusement for all ages. It's a place to play ball, toss a frisbee or lay on your back and feel the sun.

If adventure captures your mood, hike on the hills and follow a path near a set of railroad tracks. Soon you will be at the now deserted Yates Cider Mill.

So park a lunch, call a friend and discover that crowded beaches aren't summer's only activity.

Camp Fire Girls accepting campers

There are 168 openings still available for the last session at the Camp Fire Girls' Camp Wathana.

The 10-day, Aug. 12-21, will include backpacking, canoeing, horseback riding, cook-outs and crafts.

Campers need not be a member of Camp Fire Girls Detroit Area Council to attend.

Registration for Camp Wathana is handled by Mrs. Pat Jensen at the Detroit Area Council office, 51 W. Warren, Detroit, 48201, telephone 833-2670.

The Detroit Public Library, the Children's Museum and the Detroit City Theatre's Summer Stravaganza have camp brochures available.

If openings are filled, Camp Wathana will be able to meet its expenses for the summer.

Camp Fire Girls Detroit Area Council is a Torch Drive agency serving more than 8,000 girls and adults in the tri-county area.

An exciting opportunity now to think about festive times ahead... and see the entire Lovebug Collection of knit sportswear coordinates for girls, sizes 4 to 6X and 7 to 14
