

Italian craftsmen made this wool gabardine leisure suit for one of the best designers of casual wear: Raphael. It's beautifully detailed, comes in deep green or brown, fits unbelievably well, and sells for $280.

The richest wool plaids in the world are shaped by Sussex in this natural shoulder suit. Gently shaped, beautifully detailed, in warmly shaded wool plaids, at $275.

Yves Saint Laurent's grand entrance into men's fashion: a thoroughly French, thoroughly elegant sport coat with rope shoulders, deep side vents, and suppressed waist. The rich brown plaid is a fine wool blend. $100.

Some things never change, they just get more beautifully distilled. Like H. Freeman's 1974 version of the grey pencil striped vested suit. A soft shouldered, traditional model that shows this fine maker's fantastic attention to detail. It's pure wool worsted, and the price is $250.
