Walking Trip

The only platform you should be on this fall is one at the train station. This season shoes step down from unbelievable heights, become sophisticated, styled and practical.

No longer will balancing be part of your daily ritual. Instead, single sole shoes let you walk through any day without a teeter.

The pump returns in a myriad of variations. Daintier heels have appeared along with toes that come more to the point.

Shoes whose "uppers" completely encase the foot will be congenial with slacks, dresses or shirts.

Another footnote for all fashion moods is the strap. Little ones wrap ankles, while wider, more supportive straps, hug heels. Criss-crossed, "t'd or otherwise straps are stripping footwear.

The new styles make your feet important but not dominant. The color coding prevalent in clothing continues to your footwear.

Deep burgandies, greens, blues, shades of brown and grey and of course black lend to the continuity of the world color look.

And without a doubt, shoes are finally designed to match their purpose. Though serving decorative purposes they are made for walking, no matter where that walking is done.

From our collection of sportswear wardrobe builders — our three piece pantsuit is a terrific foundation to build on — a chamois jacket with lamb collar and cuffs, chocolate brown pants with matching turtle-neck sweater. Sizes 8 to 16. Chamois/brown only, $178.
