Go Glitter

Unless you're insured by Lloyd's of London or have a safety deposit vault at home, you probably aren't wearing the family jewels as much as before in light of the current crime picture.

Don't worry about it at all — it's become relatively un-chic to wear those jazzy jewels, anyhow.

Fakes are fabulous, also safer, and offer a person more variety in the jewelry department.

The art deco look is still a prevalent thought among the minds of jewelry designers — but getting ahold of the real stuff is even a bigger coup.

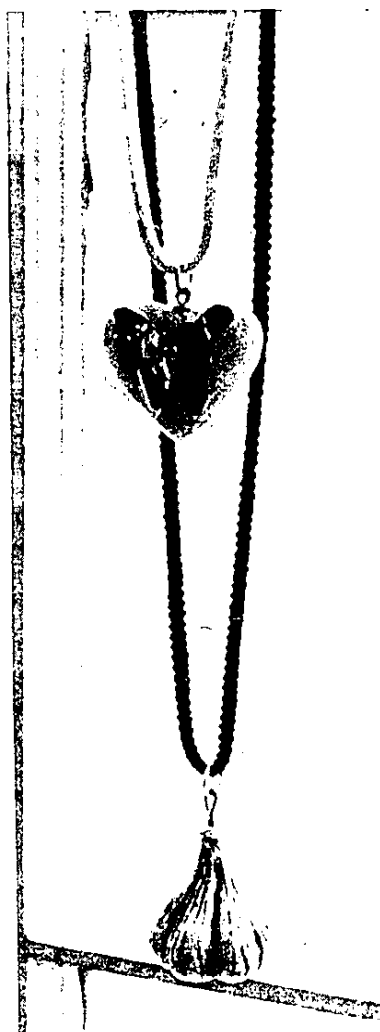

The ladylike look demands a pin or two in a person's jewelry wardrobe and of course some elegant bracelets complete the picture.

Willy Woo believes in the "simpler the better" philosophy for his jewelry. He has taken rods of various colors of clear plastic and twisted and turned it into every shape imaginable from the pretzel's knot to a loop in earrings, bracelets and necklaces.

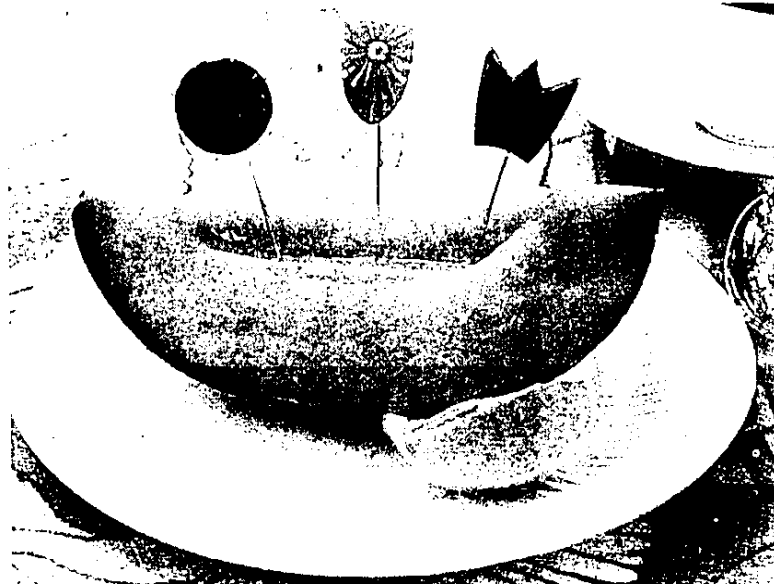

His work resembles the kind of "play" jewelry one might have played with as a child and it achieves almost the same kind of simple charm.

Don't overlook the Indians when you look to accessorizing with jewelry. This natural American jewelry adds a handsome note to sports clothes.

If you don't want to wear precious jewels, switch to real precious metals, especially silver, for Fall '74 — the look is right, even if it is getting more expensive.
