Just what effect the moon has upon snow balls I cannot say, but I believe that the simplest mind if at all fair can see a direct relation between local opinion, prohibition of the liquor traffic and savings bank deposits. The liquor traffic is the greatest known cause of poverty. Abundance of savings bank deposits and poverty are very far apart. This is not a theory. Maine has had prohibition longer than any other state; she also has the greatest per capita of savings bank deposits. Kansas comes next and ranks second in both respects. Wherever prohibition has been in force for a reasonable length of time the same truth holds.

New Graduates Tuition Law.

The new law allowing 8th grade graduates of rural schools the right to have their tuition paid by the district to one of the three nearest high schools does not become operative in time to have any tuition paid next year. The law goes into effect Sept. 2. It provides that the parents or guardians of pupils who have completed the eighth grade in districts where no high schools are maintained, may notify the district board that such children desire to enter a high school. This must be done on or before the fourth Monday in June. The attorney general holds that inasmuch as the law does not take effect until the second day of September, no notice can be legally served on school boards by parents or guardians until June, 1909, and that no tax can be raised this year for the paying of such tuition.

BUSINESS MEN'S DAY.

Detroit Wholesalers to Entertain Michigan Retail Dealers.

Wednesday, September 6 will be "Wholesalers' day" at the Michigan State Fair and the Detroit Wholesale Association has arranged a program of entertainments that will give the visitors an extremely delightful time. On this occasion merchants from all parts of Michigan and the surrounding states will be guests of the Detroit organization, which will see that nothing is left undone for their enjoyment. The Michigan State Fair and the city of Detroit has a reputation for doing things and the visitors that day will be treated to surprises at every turn.

The Wholesalers' association will have a tent on the grounds with free telephone service for visitors, who thus will be able to talk with friends back home.

The evening will be known as "Wholesalers' night" for which a special entertainment will be prepared including a magnificent banquet and a general vaudeville performance. There will take place in front of the grand stand a grand display of fireworks, including many large pieces which will conclude the evening.

Michigan retail merchants say that Detroit is one of the best places in the country in which to buy goods. Above everything else the sun and the general public. The shops, mills and wholesale houses are numerous and the proprietors enter to the very high standard of trade. This fact was demonstrated a year ago when five thousand visiting merchants attended the annual meeting.

It is expected that this year's attendance will exceed that of 1905. The railroads are interested in the event and will furnish cheap rates into Detroit from every part of the state.

Real Indian Village.

The American Indian is gradually disappearing and his mode of life is becoming more and more extinct. To the general public the management of the Michigan State Fair, realizing the educational features that lie in the Indian village, has secured an attraction of this sort, which is promised to be one of the leading features of the midway at the coming State Fair, September 2 to 10.

This is a real Indian village and consists of "Chief Two Stars" and his followers, consisting of one hundred persons.

The Indians will live at the Fair grounds in tepees, in the same wild style that existed on western plains fifty years ago.

These Indians will eat, sleep and appear in a semi-barbaric style that will be interesting to every visitor at the grounds. This attraction will be as fascinating to adults as to the children. The Indians will execute war dances, shoot with arrows, ride bucking horses, rope cattle and do everything that is so common on the western reservations.

The State Fair of Today.

The state fair has become recognized as an auxiliary in helping to build up the general agricultural interests of the state and agricultural districts. The incentive of exhibition comes and friendly competition at the Michigan State Fair, which opens September 2 and continues until September 10, will stimulate and encourage in the minds of Michigan stockmen and agriculturists, a desire the following year to do something better.

The fair influence is not confined to one line or one branch of agricultural industry, but extends to every department of home life, farm and industrial enterprise. It is sufficiently broad to take in every feature of manufacture and production, even to the educational accomplishments of the public schools of the state.

The Michigan State fair has become the great clearing house institution as it were, for the breeder, the feeder, the producer, the scientist, and in fact every branch of industry to be introduced to an intelligent and appreciative public. It is here where the wide-awake producer brings the best, the choicest of his herd, the pick of his product, whatever nature, to test the merit and its value when placed in comparison with the work and efforts of others. The State Fair is an educational institution and a means of congregating into one systematically arranged exhibition, the best of everything the state has produced.
