State travel rising

A slow start with conditions improving as the year progressed was the spring-summer travel picture in Southeast Michigan.

A sampling of its members by the Southeast Michigan Travel and Tourist Association showed 41 percent reporting a decrease in business for the March-July period of 1974. Thirty-one percent showed an increase in business with 18 percent about the same for the comparable months of 1974. Ten percent of the replies were in the new business category or provided mixed answers.

The gas shortage early in the year and the rise in gasoline prices later in 1974 had the greatest effect according to those businessmen reporting a drop in either attendance or income. The percentage of decrease was mainly in the five to 10 percent range.

A definite drop in out-of-state visitors was noted and this was reflected in reports from major entrances to Southeast Michigan via bridge, tunnel and highway.
