

Husband-wife team favors natural

"AT THE END of the line you can't go down it and say 'I did this one and you did that one!' We both skitch. And when it's done it's really something we worked on together. And it's really natural for us to work together," said Mrs. Haire.

The only difference, design-wise, the two have had was over length. "I wanted the skirts long, but I guess Bill likes to see legs," Mrs. Haire said.

The skirts are mid-calf... seemingly the perfect compromise.

being a woman is a great advantage to a designer.

"You have to get a feeling for the clothes and you learn a lot of different things by wearing the clothes you design. You learn where to make changes so they are more comfortable, where to put a pocket or an extra button," she said.

So by learning, Mr. and Mrs. Haire have designed their fall line. Suedes in rust and blue combine with each other or with tweedy rust wools or solid camel tones.

A flowering, but definitely fall, velveteen cotton skirt, matches a belted big top of the same fabric. Or match the skirt with a long, button cardigan in blue.

tion is interchangeable, including its makers.

"The advantages of being a team is that you can be in two places at one time," said Mrs. Haire.
