Privacy needn't be dull

A bathroom by any other name is a guest bath, powder room (do people still "powder"?), lavatory, massage room, sauna, inner sanctum or in this open society, a conversation piece.

Fortunately today's powder room no longer has to have wallpaper with sweet ladies primping, mirrors with bows on the wall to qualify.

Instead people are using as much imagination in this room as in others throughout the house.

Mirrors cover every surface to give a glitter to this necessary chamber.

Depending on one's persuasion this room can be starkly unfurnished or cluttered for intimacy.

Old stained glass windows are replacing the curtained effect; still others have very wispy curtains to let the light through.

Plants are taking their place in about the best room in the house for them.

Luxury is a keynote in many special baths. Marble top counters, wall to wall carpeting, gold-plated hardware, specially matched towelings and sunken baths are just a few of those touches.

Look for small art collections inside those cloisters, too.
