Little things mean a lot

Stymied for a decorating theme?
Perhaps you're not thinking small enough.

Considering a scheme for one room, or a whole house can be overpowering.

Get down to the nitty gritty.

Consider some of the little things you might have which could start you thinking on a scheme.

Little things like an antique Imaria bowl your great grandmother received as a wedding present or that bargain fireplace mantle you picked up at a country auction could be good thematic material.

Even if you don't have a fireplace, that mantle would make an interesting focal point in an appropriate setting and the hearth could then be filled with plants.

An antique plate, a la Williamsburg, Charleston, Vienna or Copenhagen might help develop a color scheme. An old clock could help to determine what other woods should be used in a room to complement its case.

Architectural embellishments like "lace" (that charming Victorian gingerbread wood work), stained glass windows or pieces of old wrought iron fencing also can set themes working.

Also it is these precious items which add charm and interest to homes, which otherwise lack character because of the cost of building detail into our homes today.
