

Show goes laud 'lady-like' looks

By ROSE WEBER

The more than 500 women and sprinkling of men who attended the Bloomfield Welcome Wagon annual luncheon and fashion show last week gave their stamp of approval to the new lady-like fashions.

Members of the club paraded down the runway at the Raleigh House in a variety of fashions by Margo's Boutique of Birmingham. Murmurs of approval greeted the trim, tailored sportswear that began the show.

Most prominent in the collection was the shirt-jac style jacket and straight leg slacks. Shades of red ranging from a soft coral to tomato red and browns from camel to forest dominated the collection.

Daytime dresses and suits all had the longer hemlines just brushing the knee in the new swirly swing or pleated style skirts.

SUITS WITH blazer jackets and coordinated blouses with sleeveless sweaters in air accent shade predominated.

Long skirts with turtle neck tops or soft blouses and jackets in casual wool, polyester and velvet drew applause.

As the long gowns for evening appeared Penny Quaine, fashion coordinator for Margo's asked whether the women preferred that style to the preceding evening pajamas.

The long gowns received a unanimous vote of approval.

Again soft, feminine and ladylike were the adjectives. Fluid fabrics and lines, high necklines, cropped jackets or long coats of self fabric predominated.

Furs by Frederick accompanied most of the outfits. Short jackets with interesting designs worked in colors and white mink, sheared and regular fox and mink coats in knee length styles were greeted with approval.

BUT THE SHOW topper was a full length mink coat banded at the bottom with three rows of grey fox. Fox, trimmed the cuffs and collar.

The event, which benefitted the Clinton Valley Center in Pontiac, followed a harvest theme with hostesses dressed in denim overalls, red checked shirts and farmer style straw hats.

Table decorations and life size scarecrows decorated the room.

General chairman of the luncheon was Betty Rahaley of Bloomfield Hills and co-chairman was June Shankwiler of West Bloomfield with Ethel Reno of Bloomfield Hills as assistant chairman.

Carol Wasicko and Mary Grimes as co-chairmen coordinated models Mary Ann Shantz, Loretta Schwann, Mary Weitzel, Laura Malik, Charlene Potter, Pete Dixon, Marcia Powell, Mercedes Miller, Daphne Rowsey and Marlene Sparvero.

Music was provided by club member DeeDee Bowers. Completing the entertainment was a country dance routine by Christopher Flynn School of Ballet of Rochester.

A hair styling demonstration by DeLore Hair Fashions, Bloomfield completed the afternoon.
