

Skiers plan '74-75 season

The Suburban Downhill and Chowder Society held its first meeting in the Farmington Community Center when more than 50 persons crowded into the Green Room to hear the organizing committee present plans for the season's skiing and social events.

The 1974-75 program will feature local skiing and social events, two Northern Michigan weekends with the group traveling by bus and an early spring trip to the Canadian Rockies.

The next meeting of the society will be held in the center on Thursday (Nov. 21) at 8 p.m. A Don Thomas Sporthaus fashion show will be the featured event. And firm plans for a soon-to-happen Chowder Fest will also be revealed.

The society's activities are designed to appeal to all skiers, from beginners to experts, from young adults to family groups.

Man of the evening: Minoru Yamasaki

Dinner honors top architect

By GRETCHEN HITCH

Minoru Yamasaki, world famous architect who lives in a house of his design in Bloomfield Hills and has offices in Troy, was honored Saturday at a testimonial dinner.

The Tudor manorial design of Meadow Brook Hall was the setting preceding the opening at Meadow Brook Art Gallery of "MINORU YAMASAKI — A Retrospective," an exhibit of his designs. Mr. and Mrs. Yamasaki were joined in the receiving line by dinner chairman Mrs. Peter Spivak and Oakland University President and Mrs. Donald O'Dowd.

After cocktails in the Great Hall, guests strolled to the ballroom, the Fountain room and the Game room for a beef wellington dinner. Opening the speeches, Oakland University President O'Dowd noted the "world stature" of Yamasaki and "his supreme artistic form." O'Dowd said Yamasaki had opened the consciousness of citizens to new patterns of spatial organization and innovated relationships between people and structures.

YAMASAKI RESTATED his philosophy to create a total environment and, most important, an enhanced environment.

"Architecture is the most important of the arts because (See YAMASAKI, page 4)
