

Farrin focuses on knits

Soft and lean is the look in knits this season and the fashions of Mary Farrin glorify it.

The London-based designer, whose collection was shown recently at Hudson's, features shades of beige, off-white, gold and silver in her hand-knit, crocheted-like collection.

The materials for many of Farrin's ensembles were handknit on the Mediterranean island of Gozo near Malta.

Approximately 600 girls, forming what Ms. Farrin calls her "cottage industry," use yarns from France and Italy to knit her creations in their homes.

The result is a softly clinging look that flatters the slender woman.

Her collection is divided into the five categories of Chalk, Marble, Sunset, a Chunky and Corn.

THE PURE wool sweaters from the casual chunky collection have beige and true-brown large yarn loops around the collars and cuffs.

Her Sunset ensembles for evening are an intricate weave of copper and silver lurex and they mix and match with bodice-type camisole tops, long skirts and full pants.

The Marble outfits, named for the alternating beige, blue and yellow hues in the fabric, can be worn for day or evening.

The Marble street-length knits and the slip-top long dresses come with gracefully sleeved long sleeve jackets.

Whether for day or evening, the Farrin collection succeeds in providing a totally feminine look.

The Farrin ensembles can be seen at all Hudson stores.
