

At Raven

Claudia Schmidt (right) and Ken Bloom (above) will be appearing at the Raven Gallery Wednesday through Sunday from now until Jan. 19. Schmidt is a former Detroit resident and has completed a recent tour of colleges in New York state. Bloom is a multi-talented string and wind instrument player who has toured Europe, appeared with many nationally known groups and is now out on his own.

All that jazz

Detroit Historical Society members are going to "jazz up" the Detroit Historical Museum.

A jazz ensemble with a sizable Detroit area following, the popular New McKinney's Cotton Pickers featuring vocalist Dave Wilborn, will highlight the Society's new members party.

"And All That Jazz," from 8-9:30 p.m. Sunday.

The jazz program was planned to tie in with the Museum's current exhibit, "Jazz in Detroit," which will be on display through March 3.

Youtheatre stages play

"Freedom Train," the story of Harriet Tubman, makes its Detroit debut Saturday, at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. on stage in the Detroit Institute of Arts Youtheatre.

Produced by the New York Children's Theatre Center for audiences ages seven to adult, "Freedom Train" is a powerful stage version of the story of the "underground railroad" and one of its most celebrated "conductors." Traditional music, specially arranged, rounds out this production.

Detroit, with its Canadian border, was a crucial stop in the Underground Railroad. The "Consumers' Power Company" has put together a traveling exhibition entitled "The Underground Railroad." This exhibit will be on display in the lobby for performances of "Freedom Train."
