Space man lecture set

SOUTHFELD—Space travel is already a part of our lives, whether we like it, or not.

That is the premise of a lecture and slide presentation by Gordon Gray at the next Southfeld Series presentation Feb. 20 in the Raleigh House.
Gray, who has been called the space program's Billy Graham, is self-cal assistant for space programs at Rockwell International's space division in California.
Gray spent years as a space evangelist during the Apollo project and his background with Rockwell Includes assignments with the X-15, the Apollo and the space shuttle.
Using photographs from space and

Thing photographs from space and photographic examples of spanoff ben-efits now used on earth, Gray at-tempts to prove that for the "two cents out of the average tax dollar" which the entire space program has cost, the benefits are far greater than in most other areis of the federal barder!

in most other areas of the federal budget.

Gray's presentation is expected to include not only Apollo but also the upcoming joint American-Russian space project. Gray said he has designed his presentation so that "I can understand it, anybody can understand it anybody can understand it."

Gray has presented lectures through only the country. Making his intial appropriate the presentation so that "I can understand it, anybody can understand it.
