Possibly a more ant description for the man who is president of the Farmington Area Chamber of Commerce and president of the Metropolitan National Bank of Farmington would be a financial weathervane.

As the person who chairs the regular meetings of the chamber board and the man behind the desk at the bank where the buck stops, or starts, withby follows the economic pulse of the community. According to Wibby, the pulse rate is steady and improving, if the community of the community of the community of the community of the control of the stational placture. The local one is equally optimistic.

"My customers are all Farminaton."

This is relative to the national picture. The local one is equally optimistic.

"My customers are all Farmington area people and, by and large, they're doing very well. Sure, there are some who are complaining and in trouble, but they're the same ones who were complaining a year ago when times were booming. "GOOD MEERCHANTS adjust to what's happening. Within our operation we see very little sign of recession. Understand, I'm dealing with a very natrous market, and let's face it, a very affluent one." Expressing his faith in the American system, he has one qualifying thought on government interference with the process, "sometimes too much and too fast."

It is speaking of "deral spending money of the heart hat when the government needs more morey to spend, it prints more, without increasing the gold reserves."
