The second time around Love is lovelier

Maybe "Love is lovelier the second time around" but the remarrying bride must face up that the first time is the last time for all ceremonial pomp and circumstances.

Over a period of years it has been interesting to note that girls who eloped on the occasion of their first marriages or settled for just the basics—"We don't want to go through all that grief and nonsense"—are the ones who are gung-ho for all the trimmings on the second try. They feel they have been "cheated."

A second, third or fourth ceremony should, in the name of good taste, be simple and unpretentious.

HOWEVER:

The reception or whatever type of party that follows can be a large, swinging bash, if that's what the bride orders.

Also, the rule for a small and simple ceremony holds only if it is the girl who has been married before. The bridegroom's previous record does nothing to affect the nature of a gala First Time for the bride.

A First Time bridegroom and a Second Time bride are still bound to discuss the circumstances and come up with a compromise.
