

Naomi Burch (right) gives Donna Kaminski her marriage license many people are coming in for the second and third time. Mrs. Burch said this is happening more and more.

"Sometimes we have a couple where each has been married as much as three and four times already."

It seems that unhappy experiences aren't scaring people away, as in the case of one Bloomfield Township resident who was applying for his second license.

"I'm no more apprehensive this time than I was the first time I got my license," he said.

"When you've been married, you get used to it. There's enough good about marriage to make you want to try again."

The prospective bridegroom said many of his friends are also divorcing and remarrying again.

When asked why they don't just live together, he said, "Don't you read the Bible. Marriage is the right thing to do."

Mrs. Burch thinks marriage is the right thing to do too, even though she sees so many couples come to the clerk's office for their marriage license only to return to file for divorce.
