

U of M, U of M-Dearborn raise tuition

Both the University of Michigan and the University of Michigan-Dearborn will increase their tuition for the fall term.

Tuition will increase $22 per term for full-time resident students at the University of Michigan-Dearborn.

Included in the seven per cent increase is a student allocation for parking, approved by the regents in June, of about $6 per person.

The tuition hike is the first for the university's Dearborn campus since fall 1972, when fees were raised 4.8 per cent. As a result of the new rates, a full-time undergraduate Michigan resident enrolling at UMD this fall will pay $320 per term instead of the previous rate of $298. Full-time graduate students who are Michigan residents will now pay $372, up from $346.

THE TUITION INCREASE for UMD will maintain approximately the same ratio of tuition levels with the Ann Arbor campus which existed last year. Tuition has been about $100 a semester less at Dearborn.

UM-Dearborn Chancellor Leonard E. Goodall attributed the tuition rise to "a continual decline in the level of state support at UM-Dearborn over the last several years, coupled with a general inflationary trend in the economy."

Citing figures which show state support per student at UM-D as $2,167 in 1972-73, $2,300 in 1973-74, and $1,824 in 1974-75, Goodall said that "it appears this trend will continue for the coming year." While the campus has been able to absorb some of the budget reduction, through economy measures, he added, additional cuts "threaten the quality of our education program."

Goodall also pointed out that the decrease in state support for UMD has occurred at a time of rapid growth for the campus, which has quintupled enrollment over the past five years. Last fall, 4,300 students enrolled at UM-Dearborn.

TUITION AT THE U OF M will increase an average of six per cent.

The new undergraduate fees will be: $424 (now $400) per term for freshmen and sophomores who are Michigan residents; $1,378 (now $1,300) for non-resident freshmen and sophomores; $480 (now $452) for Michigan resident juniors and seniors; and $1,484 (now $1,400) for non-resident juniors and seniors.

Other changes in the fee schedule per term are:

Michigan residents—graduate students, $580 (now $548); medicine and dentistry, $840 (now $800); public health, $800 (now $760); law, $658

(now $620); and graduate candidacy, $356 (now $336).

Non-residents—graduate students, $1,504 (now $1,420); Master of Business Administration students, $1,378 (now $1,300); medicine and dentistry, $1,680 (now $1,600); public health, $1,620 (now $1,580); law, $1,500 (now $1,440); and graduate candidacy, $356 (now $336).

SPEAKING OF THE fee increase, Vice-President Frank Rhodes said "we are acutely aware of the problems posed by increases in the University's tuition schedule. However, the inflationary pressures on the University can only be met by this modest percentage increase in tuition. Utilities in particular have risen beyond the point where state appropriation increases can make up the difference. "We believe we are being realistic by holding the line at a six per cent increase. Increased financial aid funds will reflect the fee increases. "Michigan's tuition is still considerably lower than at comparable private institutions. Recent surveys of educators which have shown that Michigan is among the nation's foremost half-dozen universities, indicate the outstanding quality and range of programs which are available to Michigan students."

United Way selects workshop leaders

John Reddy of Birmingham and Dave N. Atinip of Troy have been named workshop leaders for the 1975 communications seminar sponsored by the United Way of Michigan (UWM).

Reddy is executive editor of the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, and Atinip is a copywriter for Batten, Barton, Burstone and Osborn, Inc.

The seminar will be Thursday, July 24, at the Kellogg Center at Michigan State University.

More than 200 communicators, professional and volunteer, from across Michigan are expected to attend the seminar. They will represent more than 100 local United Way organizations and other agencies.

Purpose of the seminar is to instruct participants in modern communications techniques which they may use in public information programs.

UWM is a statewide federation of 23 health and social services agencies. It provides communications, planning and budgeting services as well as financial support for its members. It receives its money from the local United Way campaigns held throughout Michigan each fall. UWM's budget for the current year is $5.4 million.

The United Foundation is providing $3.4 million for UWM's member services this year.
