

MAKE 'BIG MONEY' IN HAWAII

Sugar Planters in the Islands Are 'Doing Great Wealth' from 'Plantations.'

There are probably more self-made millionaires residing in Honolulu than in any city twice its size on the mainland. According to Van Norden's Magazine, there are scores of millionaires in Hawaii and in the making in Hawaii.

Men of moderate means last spring became by full moon of great wealth after the sugar crop had been marketed. Small plantations of a few acres ago are now of high finance today expending hundreds of thousands of dollars annually advertising their output that was not worth a tenth of that sum all told years ago.

There are a few who have created opportunities for themselves. Alexander Young, the many times millionaire of Honolulu, came to Hawaii a poor man, worked hard, helped organize and conduct the Honolulu Iron works, which now makes sugar machinery to be shipped to every quarter of the globe, retired from hard labor and built as his monument a hotel that is equal in appointments to any found in London or New York and with a roof garden more spacious than any on the continent. He is content that he has lost a million maintaining this public palace, for it is credit to Alexander Young and to Honolulu. His building set a new pace and the business city of wood was practically rebuilt in stone and marble.

One Trump, One Finger.

Joe Howell, in his recollections of the street, tells a story characteristic of the day now passed away. While on a Mississippi river steamer he was sitting near a table watching a game of poker. Another gambler was making it his business to spy out the trumps in one player's hand and telegraph the information to his opponent by laying the same number of fingers carefully on the table. Of course one gained steadily for a considerable time until at last the Jones' hand received one trump. The far was designated by the forger and laid on the table, which the losing cardman very coolly but adroitly cut off with a heavy knife.

"Hello, stranger? What are you about? You have cut off one of my fingers," cried the dismembered man. "I know it," said the amputator, coolly, "and if I had more trumps you'd have lost more fingers."

Curled Her to the Altar.

The wedding which took place last night, said the bridegroom, was accompanied by a ride to church and curling her hair in the carriage. The wedding took place in that hot spell in June. The bride had plenty of hair, but it was curled and waved her hair just before leaving home, but by the time she was ready to start her hair was a sight.

"I never can see how you can face people looking like this. There is only one thing to be done. You must take an alcohol lamp and curling iron and come in the carriage with me, then you can put on the finishing touches just before we get to the church."

"At the risk of blowing us all up with a spirit lamp that is what we did, and by the way, that bottle of kerosene the bride reached the altar properly cooled."

To Make Sleep Come.

If you cannot get to sleep try a sponge bath made thus: Into eight ounces of alcohol put two of ammonia and two of camphor. Shake thoroughly and when well mixed add four ounces of sea salt and enough hot water to fill a quart bottle. To apply it pour a little of the liquid in a shallow dish, moisten the whole body a little at a time by dipping a small sponge in it. Rub on only very little, then finish with a vigorous rubbing with a coarse straw towel. Get into bed, and we'll assure the quick arrival of "Nature's restorer, baby sleep."

Family Doctor.

Irving Was So Modest.
"Irving and Tennyson were very close friends," said the actor at the Hungry Club. "They went about much together, but Irving was very critical of Tennyson."
"Tennyson is a fine fellow," he said to me one day, "but is vain, terribly vain. One day we were going down to Piccadilly circus together in a cab when we got out of the cab and were gathered. Tennyson, vain fellow, was flattered, very, very much flattered. Would you believe it, he thought those people had gathered to see him get out of the cab?"

Interesting Wagner Souvenir.

A curious Wagner souvenir in the form of a silk handkerchief was sold recently at Leppan's in Berlin. The handkerchief had the following inscription: "To Frau Minna Wagner, on her marriage to Musical Director Richard Wagner, Königsberg, November 22, 1867." Wagner was at that time 24 years old and the director of the orchestra at the Königsberger Stadttheater. His bride was Wilhelmine Planer, a member of the sock company.
